Sheila K. - When things go well, not a peep out of him. But one slip, and he raises the roof.

Monroe K. - Things are supposed to go well. It's when they don't, one step out of line and the warden lets me have it!

Sheila K. - It gets pretty grim, knocking myself out to keep things running smoothly, and never a kind word, a pat on the back, or even a hint of praise. But boy, one step out of line and the warden lets me have it!

There's no reward for good behavior either, like in jail, but extra tongue-lashes for bad. This is an awful way to feel about a husband who at heart is a real good guy. But why can't he get it past his heart and up into his mouth and eyes?

Maybe I'm a hopeless romantic, but I crave a little soft soap. A gentle whisper in my ear of something as curly as, "I love you, dear," would tide me all through spring housecleaning. I think if Monroe ever got me a bottle of fine perfume, I'd frame it and just look at it for a few years - just for the lift!

But no, it's bawling-out. And his "duty gifts" only give me a worse pain. A leather scrap-basket, or a shoe-shine kit. Grr.

Monroe K. - Sheila knows I think she's someone special. That's why I married her in the first place. Actually she's almost perfect. The only reason I raise the dickens with her is not to spoil her.

As for gifts, I tried the frou-frou kind just once. I gave her a necklace she hates, never wears. And when she found out how much I paid for it, she scolded for weeks.

Nobody keeps giving me gold stars when my work is OK. That's my job. It's expected. Same with Sheila and the house.

The Council: Why are men so smart when it comes to files, and so dumb about wives? It's honey that gets them both! But, unlike the fly, Sheila can yell. And she's yelling, "I've been trapped!"

With no more honey, and plenty of vinegar, Sheila's headed for emotional "acidosis" which can turn home sweet home sour, and fast! A Belgian journal reporting recently on the seven most common pitfalls facing husbands (according to several thousand wives) and found that the list was headed by: Lack of Appreciation.

Monroe needs a refresher course in human psychology. Truck drivers, for example, are "expected" to drive safely. Nevertheless, they receive "Safety Awards" periodically for doing just that! Nobody can do a job, no matter how well, without some sort of response and commentary from those he's doing it for.

But Sheila is expected to thrive on silence or on the for-your-own-good sort of reprimand a football coach gives his losing team between

Conservation Stamp To Be Issued Feb. 2

Local conservation leaders are looking forward to the release of the world's first range conservation postage stamp, according to C. E. Brown, supervisor of the Rogue River National forest.

The 4-cent commemorative stamp, to be issued Feb. 2 at the annual meeting of the American Society of Range Management in Salt Lake City, will go on sale in other cities Feb. 3.

The stamp will symbolize a contrast between the previous open range days and today's scientific land management techniques, Brown noted. The left side will be a reproduction of the famous drawing "Trail Boss" by Charles Russell. The right side will be a modern conservation scene.

The U.S. forest service, soil conservation service, bureau of land management, and bureau of Indian affairs are cooperating with the post office department in plans for the first day ceremonies. Members of the east of the television show "Rawhide" will attend the banquet in Salt Lake City where the new stamp will be unveiled.
