Leading Democrats Declare Hatfield 'Reversing' Self

Salem (UPI)—Leading Democrats in the legislature have charged Gov. Mark Hatfield with "reversing" himself in calling a conference on Oregon's economy to seek ways to pep it up.

The conference, set here for Feb. 14, will include about 50 persons from all segments of industry. Hatfield said the meeting was prompted by the sagging lumber market.

This—the legislators said—was not the picture of Oregon's economy that Hatfield painted in his message to the 1961 legislature three weeks ago.

All agreed the conference is a good idea, but it should have been done months ago.

Former Senate President Walter J. Pearson (D-Portland) said he was "surprised" to hear that the meeting had been called, especially since the governor's staff told the pre-legislative conference here in December that the state's economy was "at a peak."

"His message to the legislature carried this theme," Pearson said, "and now he has reversed himself, saying Oregon is in trouble. It is hard to keep up with the governor's changing viewpoints on almost every subject."

A Hatfield spokesman said it is "not a panic move and not an admission that the economy is faltering. This conference would be valuable whether the economy is in a state of acceleration, stagnation or dislocation."

In announcing the conference, the governor said some parts of the economy are "dislocated."

Sen. Al Flegel (D-Roseburg) declared that Hatfield's legislative message last month sounded like "Pollyanna, peaches and roses." His area is one of the biggest areas of unemployment in the state.

"Now, only three weeks later, we're having a meeting to discuss a chaotic condition."

Sen. E. D. Potts (D-Grants Pass) said an effort should have been made "six months ago, before the cat got out of the bag. The cat—unemployment—is out of the bag now."

Rep. Beulah J. Hand (D-Milwaukie) said the Oregon unemployment problem appears to be "more serious than the governor would have us believe." She accused Hatfield of "glossing it over" until now.

House Speaker Robert Duncan (D-Medford) described Hatfield's call of the meeting "recognition that all is not rosy for the economy in Oregon anymore than it is in the United States as a whole. This is a step that should have been taken last fall but I'm glad it is being done, although tardily."

Senate President Harry Bolvin (D-Klamath Falls) was more in sympathy with the governor. "The conference is good," he said, "it's not too late."

George Brown of Portland, political education director for the Oregon AFL-CIO, also saw the bright side.
