$600 Per Dependent May Be Taken Before Figuring Income Tax Payment

Editor's note: This is the third of five dispatches on preparing your income tax in the most economical manner. Today's dispatch covers rules for claiming dependents.

By EDWARD COWAN

Washington - (UPI) - The other day a friend was gleefully telling us that his baby, due in January, had arrived in December. "An extra tax exemption," he chorled.

The reason for his good spirits was the fact that a taxpayer can claim a new baby as a dependent for the entire year even if the infant was born as late as Dec. 31.

Each eligible dependent who meets the rules qualifies as an exemption for the taxpayer. That means he can subtract $600 per dependent from his income before figuring his tax.

(Of course he must report his full income on his tax return, then take the exemptions as indicated in the instructions.)

Since the minimum tax rate is 20 per cent, each dependent is worth at least $120 in saved taxes to a taxpayer (20 per cent of $600).

At Least One Exemption (Taxpayers also reduce their taxable income by deductions. They will be discussed in the fourth dispatch in the UPI Tax Series.)

Every taxpayer gets at least one exemption - himself. That's why a single person with no dependents pays no income tax if his earnings in 1960 were $800 or less.

A married person gets an exemption for himself and one for his wife - unless she files a separate return or is claimed as a dependent by someone else, such as a parent.

A person who was 65 or older before the end of the 1960 is allowed an extra exemption - or two in all. Consequently, his taxable income starts at $1,200.

Blind persons also are allowed an extra exemption, regardless of age.

A person over 65 and blind would get both extra exemptions, or three in all.

A married person filing a joint return may claim old age and blindness exemptions for his wife, if she actually qualifies, even if she had no income.

Age and blindness exemptions may not be claimed on behalf of other dependents, such as parents or children.

Five Tests To claim someone as a dependent, your relationship must meet these five tests:

1. You must have furnished more than half of his or her support in the past year (1960).

2. The dependent's own gross income must have been less than $600 for the year, unless the dependent is your child under 19 or a full-time student.

(Details on this below.)

3. The dependent must be closely related to you, or, if not, must be a member of your household who lives in your home for the entire year.

4. He or she must be a citizen of the United States. If not, then the dependent must be a resident of this country, Canada, Mexico, Panama or the Canal Zone.

5. The dependent must not make a joint return with his or her spouse. The exception for children who are under 19 or are full-time students is this: Full-time student. A son or daughter who earns $600 or more may still be claimed as a dependent by a parent who provided more than half the youngster's support, if the youngster was a full-time student, regardless of age, or if the youngster was under 19 at the end of the year. That is, the boy or girl must not have turned 19 until Jan. 1, 1961, or later.

Regardless of whether a parent claims him as an exemption, a child who earned $600 or more must file an income tax return of his own.

Even though he claims his own personal exemption his parent may still claim him as a dependent - if, of course, he is otherwise eligible.

A modest tax break is available to people who qualify as "heads of household." Usually, this means an unmarried person who furnished more than half the cost of maintaining a household for at least one relative for all of 1960.

For example, a head of household might be a widowed woman who provides a home for an elderly parent.

If the relative supported by the head of household was an unmarried child, grandchild or stepchild who shared a home with the taxpayer, he need not qualify as a dependent. If the relative is a parent who qualifies as a dependent, the household the "head" maintains for him may be separate from the "head's" own household.

Slightly Lower Rate A household head is taxed at a slightly lower rate than other single taxpayers. He or she gets about half the advantage a married couple gets from filing a joint return.

Taxpayers filing as heads of household compute their tax from Schedule III, which is specially labeled and comes with the booklet of tax instructions. The Internal Revenue Service gives out free.

Heads of household may file their return on either Form 1040 or 1040W, but not on Form 1040A, the short form.

If you and several other persons contributed to someone's support - and none of you contributed more than half - one of you may be able to claim the person as an exemption. Check with the Revenue Service or your tax consultant.

Other facts about exemptions which may be of use to you:

-You may take an exemption for a child born to you last year who died only a few seconds or minutes later - but not if it was stillborn.

-You may not claim an exemption for your spouse if you were divorced or legally separated during the year, regardless of support payments.

Beverly Aadland Quits Night Club

Miami - (UPI) - Beverly Aadland, teen-aged companion of the late Errol Flynn, quit her singing job at a much-raided Miami nightclub Wednesday, charging the place was giving her a "bad name."

"I just can't afford any bad publicity," said the 18-year-old blonde, whose singing shared the bill with a string of striptease acts.

"The manager was a real sweetheart," Miss Aadland said. "He let me out of the contract."

The management had expressed dismay earlier when Miss Aadland's guardian protested use of the words "Errol Flynn's singing discovery" in ads publicizing Miss Aadland's appearance.

The club has been getting close attention lately from Miami police who have raided it three times in eight days. Five women were arrested in a double raid Jan. 24 and charged with soliciting drinks from customers and two others picked up Tuesday night on the same charge.
