Jack Morris, according to a couple of other sports columnists in the state, is now property of the New Minnesota Vikings of the National Football league.

Details of the shift of the former Medford high athletic great from the Pittsburgh Steelers have been missed here or just were not on the Mail Tribune's news service wire over the week end. Morris, who was a football and trackman at University of Oregon after finishing Medford high, apparently was taken in the draft set up for the new club. He has played most of his pro ball with the Los Angeles Rams.

With the move, Jack joins two other ex-Oregon stars, Norm Van Brocklin, who will be coach, and George Shaw, quarterback.

Morris, is reported working this winter for Teague Lumber company, operated by his father-in-law at Roseburg.

TORNADO DRAWS RAVES
Bob Quinney and Dick Ragsdale of the Medford High school basketball team draw raves in Bill Mulflur's Pre-positions in the Oregon Journal. Mulflur quotes two coaches, who came out of the second meeting between Klamath Falls and Medford last Saturday but "don't want to be identified as they still have games with the teams involved."

It was the opinion of the two coaches that Quinney may be the best in the state. "He drives the baseline, moves through the lane, hooks and drives off the post, tips as well as anyone," Mulflur was told. It was mentioned that the man-to-man defense battle at Klamath was in Quinney's favor, regardless of whether Bruce Brickner or Gary Patzke was guarding him.

The coaches informed the Journal that one of the finest shows in prep basketball is to watch Ragsdale of the Tornado and Wally Palmberg working against each other, both being well-coordinated and pictures to watch.

BACKERS NEEDED

Eugene Active club, which has sponsored the state all-star baseball games for three years, has declined to continue with the series because of loss of more than $1,000 two years ago and $500 last year, according to Bruce Engel in his Portland Oregonian Prep Patter.

Inclement weather was blamed for the financial setback in last year's three-game series.

Coaches around the state reportedly regard the star games as being a good thing for high school ball and would not like to see them discontinued. There are interests at Eugene, principally Mel Krause, North Eugene high coach, and Hugh Luby, general manager of the Emeralds baseball club, trying to line up all-star backers for this summer. Feeling has been expressed that the games should be staged later in the summer to avoid the chance of rain.

One of the troubles over past seasons, as we see, it has been lack of publicity, at least outside of the immediate Eugene area.

COACHES IN CANADA

Don Fair in his Northwest Notes in the Oregonian mentions that Bob Hamilton, one-time Medford high hoop mentor is coaching in Canada. His team is the Lethbridge, Alta., Chinooks.

GOLFERS ENGAGED

Dick Strite, in his Eugene Register Guard High Climber, notes the engagement of two stars of the Southern Oregon Golf championships at Medford's Rogue Valley Country club. They are Shirley Siegmund, 1960 women's champion and Ron Mitchell, 1960 men's medalist and runner-up.

Shirley, of Pleasant Hill, who also won the Oregon Women's Golf association toga last year, is a Southern Oregon college student. Mitchell, Boise, Idaho, and Chico State college golfing star, an engineer in the Chico, Calif., public works department.

FINAGLING

Somewhere between the time that the game commission submitted the wording of the bill that would enable their use of the water and the delivrance of the bill to committee, there was a quick change of the bill. Perhaps the word finagle is a poor choice, but the fact remains that the change of the bill was very much like a slick card trick.

RECREATION SCORES

In the morning league of Saturday recreation basketball at the senior high school last week, the Scrubbs beat the Ongawas 37 to 27, the Wimpy Five downed the Scamgram Seven 32 to 28 and the Mafia licked the Valiants 50 to 24. Wimpy Five is unbeaten leader. Afternoon league games saw Finks beat the Camels 37 to 20 and Jacobins take the Peons 39 to 25. Saturday Saints took a forfeit from the Church Keys. Jacobins and Peons share the lead.

Chrysler To Stop Claims For Valiant

Washington — UPI — Chrysler Corp. has agreed to stop advertising that its compact car, the Valiant, gets 30 miles to the gallon.

The Federal Trade Commission announced Thursday that Chrysler had signed a stipulation barring it from making this and other advertising claims for the 1960 model Valiant.

The Valiants entered in the Mobil Gas Economy Run did not obtain substantially greater gasoline mileage than Ford Falcon and Chevrolet Corvair entered in the test, the FTC said. In fact, it said the Valiant exceeded the average gasoline mileage of its nearest competitor by only 1.27 of a mile per gallon of gas.

While the commission considers the advertising in question false and misleading, the stipulation does not constitute an admission by Chrysler that it violated the law.

Multnomah Urged As Food Test Area

Portland — UPI — The Oregon Public Welfare Commission Thursday asked the state's congressional delegation to urge that Multnomah county be made one of the test areas for a federal food stamp plan for distribution of surplus foods.

The commission made the request after President Kennedy announced the food stamp plan would be tested in four Eastern areas and one area yet to be selected.

The request was made in a telegram from Jeanne Jewett, state welfare administrator.

The Oregon Independent Retail Grocers Association also urged the congressional delegation Thursday to look into the immediate establishment of a federal surplus food distribution program in Oregon.

On the market, gold closed at the equivalent of $35.25-35 as against $35.30-40 overnight.

OLYMPIC CHAMP HERE—Rafer Johnson, above, Olympic champion and world record holder in the decathlon, will address a youth leadership dinner this evening at First Presbyterian church, sponsored by the Presbyterian Youth fellowship. The dinner is scheduled for 5:15 p.m. On Saturday at 7:30 a.m. Johnson will speak at a breakfast at Rogue Valley Country club for businessmen, students and others.

The game commission has answered the murmur of public opinion to such a degree that it's a safe bet that the only unhappy people are those who asked for the deadline change on the Applegate river. Everything is rosy, so rosy that if one had a suspicious mind he might suspect that the game commission is publicly preparing for the coming battle to merge the fish and game commissions.

CHANGE AND NO CHANGE
The early opening of April 22 is scheduled for the upper Umqua river and the Rogue above Laurelhurst bridge as well as Big Butte creek. Bass fishing will be the method, among several others, still sanctioned for Diamond Lake. The Applegate river is still open to winter steelhead fishing up to the mouth of the Little Applegate river. And the Hallegate deadline remains for another year as the upper limit to winter steelhead fishing on the Rogue river.

A TOUCHY ISSUE
The house bill that initiated John Dellencak to the trials of a state legislature, No. 1228, has much more to commend itself to local public interest than the manner of its sponsorship. The original purpose of the bill was to allow the game commission to use some of the waters of Big Butte creek for fisheries management. Since the city of Medford had exclusive rights to the waters for municipal purposes, a change of the original law was necessary to allow the game commission to build a streamside rearing pond in the drainage area.

THE ANGLER'S LOG
Those anglers who had their fishing day spoiled last Sunday on the Rogue have the Kiewit Construction company to thank for it. According to the latest word from the man who knows, if the muck from their gravel washing operation fouls things up again, irate complaints from those affected will change the timetable of operations. There is a law protecting the people and their water, and it can be enforced if enough pressure is applied.

Applegate River—Is high and muddy with more rain forecast. If things don't get too much wetter a well-soaked gob of eggs might do the job by Saturday afternoon. That is if the winter run is in.

Hillocks River—Has been going up and down like a yo-yo. It might be fishable by Saturday. A lot depends on how much rain falls between now and then. The fish are there. Gob eggs are best bet.

Klamath River—Has had the least amount of rain and might be in fishable condition. Things were quite slow last week end, but that were caught were small and dark.

Rogue River—Has had a lot of mud thrown in it and might be fishable sometime next week. Those uncatch fish have gone on upriver and a fresh batch should be showing up when the water clears. They might be bigger too.

Smith River—Reports say that the river has been quite high—up to the trees in Smith State Park. It clears fast and should be available sometime this weekend. I hope.

THE OPTIMIST'S CORNER
One of the greatest problems we have to face is the growing lack of enough water. It is a problem that can be solved if we are willing to work for the solution. A worthwhile conservation project for this area would be to let that the county gives the local watermaster enough help so that he can properly carry out his duties. There are quite a number of sandowners without water rights that are taking water from adjacent streams and making no one stops them. They can be stopped now, but it might be more difficult later.

GOOD LUCK!

Gold Reserves in Britain Increase
London — UPI — British gold reserves rose by $14 million in January, indicating a falling off in the rate of "hot money" influx from the United States, the Daily Telegraph said today.

The Telegraph said that gold reserves rose to $31 billion.

"While the inflow of hot money has dried up, no reverse movement on any scale has developed," it said. "Nor is there any reason why it should just yet, while short term interest rates are high in relation to New York and Frankfurt."

On the market, gold closed at the equivalent of $35.25-35 as against $35.30-40 overnight.

Six Men Appear In Circuit Court On Check Charges

Richard Crane, transient, was arraigned in Jackson county circuit court this week on charges of obtaining personal benefits under false pretenses. His case was continued for plea.

Crane is charged with issuing a bad check for $30 to the Groeteria super market on Jan. 7.

The case of Raymond Gerald Richardson, alias Daniel Stephen O. Quinn Jr., Boise, Idaho, was continued for sentencing. He was arraigned in circuit court on charges of uttering and publishing a forged check. He pleaded guilty to issuing a bad check for $156 to the Owl club in Medford on Sept. 11, 1958.

The case of Daniel W. Durbin, South Pacific highway, was continued for circuit court jury trial. Durbin is charged with issuing a check for $201.50 to Playless Drugs, Medford, without sufficient funds in the bank. He pleaded innocent.

Bad Check
Imposition of sentence was suspended for three years for Torrance Raymond King, 23, of 1211 West Main st., charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. He was ordered to make restitution in two years. King was charged with issuing a bad check for $20 to J. C. Penney and company on Dec. 19.

A pre-sentence investigation was ordered for Robert Murray Crandall, 145 North Grape st., charged with uttering and publishing a forged check. He pleaded guilty to charges of forging a $15 check and giving it to the Palace Cafe in Medford on Jan. 4.

The probation of John E. Clark, Mountlake Terrace, Wash., was revoked and he was sentenced to the county jail for one year on charges of violation of parole and probation.

Clark was originally sentenced for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Role of Social Worker Reviewed

Role of the psychiatric social worker in "helping people figure their own way out of things," was brought out by Thomas Goff, psychiatric social worker for the Southern Oregon Family and Child Guidance clinic Wednesday in a talk to Medford Kiwanians at their noon luncheon at Rogue Valley Country club.

Goff declared that there is no such thing as perfect adjustment or perfect happiness and spoke of the task of the psychiatric worker in helping people alleviate their burdens.

The guidance man pointed to the social changes resulting from developments in communication and from mobility of people, from industrialization and movement of people to larger towns away from the close security of family groups.

On the matter of delinquency increase, Goff asked the question, "Is there?" and remarked, "It is a statistical thing."

Doug Phillips, program advertising chairman for the Kiwanis Kapers, reported $4,870 realized so far of the $6,000 goal.

Kiwanians will have their wives as guests at the Feb. 8 meeting. It will be a Valentine luncheon.

Federal Aid for Airport Awaits Program Renewal

Airport Manager Gil Gutjahr said this week that Medford's application for federal funds to assist in extending the main runway at the city's municipal airport will have to await renewal of the federal airport aid program.

Gutjahr said the Federal Aeronautics Administration (FAA) re-out of airport aid was in 1960, and noted that it will take an act of Congress to reauthorize the program. He declined to guess on just how soon such action can be expected.

He pointed out that the Eisenhower administration asked Congress for a $40 million appropriation for airport assistance for the 1962 fiscal year. Sen. Mike Monroney (D-Okla.), however, recently introduced a bill asking for $100 million for the year.

Commenting on this Gutjahr said: "If the legislation that Monroney has introduced is passed, then our chance of getting aid will be greater than if the past administration's budget is adopted."

However, there is a great demand for federal airport aid, Gutjahr pointed out. Of the 3,579 publicly owned airports in the United States, 1,464 of them, including Medford, are planning projects costing $1 1/2 billion. Of this, slightly less than half may be asked of the federal government.

The city submitted an application for federal participation in a $1 1/2 million runway extension project in 1959, but the FAA never acknowledged the application as received. Since then the aid program has expired, and the city will have to renew its application if and when the program is continued.

Gutjahr said an extension of the airport's 5,417-foot runway is necessary if the airport is to be able to serve large commercial aircraft. He said it is proposed to extend the runway for another 3,750 feet, making a total runway length of 9,167 feet.

The estimated cost of extending the runway, and relocating such facilities as landing lights, is $1 1/2 million. Judging from past aid programs, Gutjahr believes the government could allocate about $800,000 of the cost.

However, he pointed out, the government will decline to furnish even that amount until it has been assured that the city can raise the rest of the money itself. This could be done by bond issue.

Any state participation in the project would be negligible, he said, unless the State Aeronautics board changes its attitude toward aiding municipal airports.

The airport manager said that several other airport improvements are urgently needed. Two of these are, replacement of the existing tetrahedron (wind indicator); and expansion of the ramp area for airplane parking and tie-down facilities.

These could be partially financed with some limited surplus funds that the FAA has on hand. These funds, Gutjahr explained, were at one time allocated elsewhere, but were unused and returned to the FAA.

He cautioned, however, that such financing is unlikely since there is great demand for these funds. Also, an allocation would be contingent on the city raising the rest of the money, and the city has no such money at the present time.
