Personally Speaking

By JOHN STAFFORD

Americans are curious people. Curiosity is not to be condemned. It accomplishes much good. Scientists need to be curious or no progress would be made. In its broadest application, curiosity is responsible for all of our efforts to put a man in space. We want to know what's out there.

Newspaper reporters need to have curiosity also. They're going to be interested in what's going on in the world and spread the news to millions of readers. Many times it is the news story of a reporter who was curious that reveals an injustice being done to someone or a national or international event of great importance. Day to day news reporting requires curiosity also.

Thus, last Wednesday night when we were in the Mail Tribune news room, we wondered where the fire trucks were going as they raced south on Central ave. It didn't take long to find out. Standing in Medford, one could see the sky to the south glowing.

It obviously was a big fire and with this in mind, we raced after the fire trucks. A two-story home on Carpenter Hill rd. near Phoenix was eventually leveled by the blaze. However, the story that unfolded as the flames attempted to battle the flames taught us a lesson we won't soon forget. In major disasters the curiosity of Americans sometimes is a handicap.

The Mail Tribune account of the fire made reference to remarks made by Chief Gordon Barker of the Medford fire department.

"Chief Barker said that the firemen operated under extreme handicap caused by the traffic congested roads and driveways in the immediate vicinity of the fire."

"He said that the fire was fought by relaying water from the department's tankers to the pump. Because of curiosity-seekers, the tankers had difficulty getting close enough to the house where the pump was parked. After each tanker was emptied it had similar trouble leaving the area to refill," the story said.

The chief's remarks were too mildly worded, in our opinion. The actions of some curiosity seekers bordered on being ridiculous. The road leading to the house was about 300 yards long and one lane. The house was only accessible on this road. Yet some individuals insisted on driving their cars down the road and parking along the side. One person didn't even bother to pull to the side. He parked right in the center.

Work of the firemen was complicated by having to bring water to the scene in tankers. The tanker trucks were wide and took up most of the road. They couldn't get by parked cars. Valuable time was lost locating owners of these cars and having them removed. Firemen even attempted going around the cars by leaving the road. This made matters worse. Ground on each side of the road was soft and the trucks got stuck.

One man died in the blaze. Whether he could have been saved isn't known. The fire was raging fiercely by the time firemen could get to the scene. However, actions of some curiosity-seekers didn't help the man's chances.

Everyone likes to be at the scene of a major news event. However, when our presence complicates the job being done by the major actors of the event, we should remain at home.

This is particularly true at fires. Many trucks are hundreds of feet of hose normally used, increasing the chances of some spectator getting in the way.

Why were we there? Because it's our job to report and take pictures of such news events. This is what we're paid to do. We aren't seeking excitement. On many

Basketball Heads Sport Activities

Hornbrook - Basketball is still holding the spotlight among school sports activities at the Hornbrook grammar school.

Games played recently were at Montague on Jan. 24 where the Hornbrook girls' team won and the boys lost, and at Etina on the 25th where both of Hornbrook's boys' teams won. Etina has no girls' team. In a game played at Etina on Jan. 26, Hornbrook was the victor by a score of 35-20.

On Feb. 10 and 11, the local team is scheduled in Yreka for B teams in the area. Members of the boys' team from the fifth through the eighth grades are Doug Bennett, Steve Farmer, Darrell Jones, Aaron Peters, Gary Yeager, Billy Spearin, Dale Farmer, Steve Eckert, Larry Michels, George Chadwick, David Rutledge and Danny Thompson.

Making up the girls' teams are Jennifer Cummins, Cheryl Yeager, Sheila Yeager, Barbara Burrell, Karen Cross, Marsha Farnsworth, Shirley Gillespie, Irene Dickinson, Darlene Spearin, Joan Kutzkey and Lois Sanders.

Since the Hornbrook school has no facilities for indoor basketball, all home games are played at the Hills community center.

Barnstormers To Present 3 Plays

Grants Pass - Mrs. Paul Skinner, director of the three one-act plays now in rehearsal by the Barnstormers, has announced that casting for the plays is now completed.

Appearing in "The Eagle" are Phil Voland, Walter J. Krebs, Mrs. Rex von Krohn, and Robert Hodgson. This play is a melodrama. A rather unusual play, "Sunny Morning," consists of a cast of only two players. They are Mrs. Jackson Beaman and Dave Stanger. This play is said to have been produced in many countries throughout the world. The third play is A. A. Milne's "The Ugly Duckling" and its cast includes Jim Faves and Mrs. Jack Rawls, both newcomers to the Barnstormers, and Charles Vannice, Mrs. W. A. Sharp, Mrs. Walter Krebs and Louis Sturges, longtime members of the theatrical group.

According to Mrs. Skinner, the production staff and those handling the stage settings for the plays has not yet been decided on. The plays are to be presented March 2, 3, and 4 at the Highland school in Grants Pass and tentative plans now also include entering them in theatrical competition to be held in Medford at a later date.

Grange Distributes 350 Spruce Trees

Eagle Point - C. C. Hoover, Robert Bitterling and W. E. Davies delivered 350 potted Colorado spruce trees to Eagle Point-White City area residents last week.

The trees were donated through efforts of the Eagle Point Grange. Area homes not receiving trees can contact Hoover and delivery will be made. All trees have been purchased from nurseries.

Hoover said people receiving a tree should place it on a board or cement slab outdoors and keep it moist to insure its best growth. For best results, trees should be kept in a shaded area this year, Hoover said. When planted outdoors, the bark container should not be removed. The bark will eventually provide fertilizer for the tree, Hoover said.

Trees were left at some homes not presently occupied, Hoover indicated. He said anyone living next to one of these homes is requested to take the tree and give it to someone not receiving a tree.

occasions what happens at news events is depressing. We don't enjoy being depressed. But someone has to report such happenings.

Problems Facing School

Meeting of the Prospect P.T.A. principal, spoke on the necessity of parents keeping an interest in the schools. He mentioned that complacency toward education was the attitude of too many people.

Graphic illustrations were shown on the overall achievement level of the school. It was unanimously agreed upon that the achievement level should come up.

A lively discussion followed the presentation. A list of concrete suggestions for scholastic improvement was then presented to the parents. A copy of this list may be obtained by any parent from the school.

The program for the evening was furnished by the Cub Scouts under the direction of Bill Roberts, cubmaster. Robert Krell, assistant cubmaster, introduced the boys and explained the purpose of Cub Scouting. Cub Mike Maurer explained the law of the pack. Mike Grey gave the Cub promise. Twenty-two Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Carl Adams and Jim Rogers, assisted with the performance.

It was announced that blood donors are needed by the American Red Cross. Anyone wishing to donate may go to the American Red Cross Building in Medford on Feb. 14, from 1 to 6 p.m.
