East-west winners were Mrs. Glenn Harrison and Mrs. Sam Van Dyke, first; Mrs. B. Hayes and Mrs. Richard Gordon, second; Mrs. C. A. Holmes and Mrs. Delbert Clifford, third; Mrs. Lewis Smith and Mr. Hatten, fourth.

Light-Hearted 'Rainbow' Pleases First-Nighters

Many American audiences find the combination of gay music, dancing and bright comedy the best of entertainment. Add the touch of the Irish, and the combination is practically irresistible.

"Finian's Rainbow," which opened at Medford High school last evening for a three-night run, has all of these plus the weight of a plot which has a moral issue and the opening night audience apparently found the combination a pleasing one. The student performers were interrupted by applause many times during the course of

Contract Play Set Saturday

The local units of the American Contract Bridge league will sponsor master point play Saturday, February 11, at 7:45 p.m. at Girls Community club.

Teen-Age Groups Booklet Topic

Washington, D. C.—Parents who worry about the "gang," club or group their teen-agers belong to may gain new understanding about what these associations mean from a new Children's Bureau publication, "Your Children and Their Gangs."

In a foreword to the new publication, Mrs. Katherine B. Oettinger, chief of the Children's Bureau, explained that it was written "to give parents fresh insight into why their youngsters will give their greatest interest and even loyalty to a gang or club at some periods and seem to become almost strangers in their own homes."

The publication was written by Dr. Nina Ridenour, secretary to the Ittleson Family foundation of New York City and consultant to the Mental Health Materials center, and Mrs. Edith G. Neisser, a writer who has specialized in the field of parent education and child development.

"Your Children and Their Gangs" discusses the meaning of these groups, how they help children to grow, what is meant by the group "code," the forms which groups may take, and it outlines constructive ways in which parents can express their interest in these activities.

Copies of "Your Children and Their Gangs" may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C., for 20 cents each.

Chapter Gives Recent Party

Alpha Lambda chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha sorority held a "chill feed" for members and their husbands at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Smith, 317 Howard street.

Games were the evening's entertainment, with prizes going to William Riggert and Mr. Smith.

Valentine Party Decorations New

Kansas City—(UPI)—A new series of home and party decorations make it easy to catch the spirit of the season for St. Valentine's day parties.

The decorations are feminine and frilly, especially appropriate for this romantic season, and range from party invitations to centerpieces and place mats, all in an ensemble of coordinated design.

The main items incorporate the use of honeycomb paper, which expands to give a three-dimensional effect. Designs follow the traditional roses, hearts and flowers themes, and also modernistic treatments such as the "kiss-giggle napkin" that is included in a contemporary party ensemble.

A red honeycomb heart, 15 inches tall and framed on a white background is one of the most adaptable new decorations, adding interest to doors, mirrors or mantels.

There's also a major ensemble, centered around an old-fashioned stage coach centerpiece fashioned from red and white honeycomb and lacy cut-out design.

This unit starts with an invitation in traditional roses and floral designs which match the centerpiece theme, napkins, dinner plates, cups, place mats, coasters, favors, nut cups, place cards, bridge tallies and aprons.

Contemporary items carry the same rib-tickling humor of contemporary greeting cards.

"Be mine, you fool . . ." is the message on one snack plate, "at least until the party's over."

New York—(UPI)—Spanish rice seasoning mix makes the popular vegetable casserole a quick and easy project. The packaged dry mix can be used with white or brown ground lamb kneaded with oil and bulgur, a parched, crushed lentil and tabbouleh, made of chopped parsley, bulgur, tomatoes and garlic.

In Turkey she ate dinner kebabs, barbecued lamb done on a vertical spit before an open fire. It's made of thin layers of raw lamb, browned lamb and kneaded lamb, rolled together to the size of a large boned leg of lamb.

Besides new recipes for restaurants, Miss Sheraton expects her research to yield several articles and a travel book for an international airline. Eating out whets her appetite rather than reduces it, she added.

"All I ever do is get ready to go to the next restaurant," she laughed. "During three years as restaurant writer for a magazine, I ate in 700 restaurants, not counting repeats."

Husband Helps
In private life, Miss Sheraton is the wife of a department store merchandising manager, Richard Falcone, who shares her enthusiasm for dining out. "He's invaluable," she said. "I need a second opinion in sampling new foods."

Their two-year-old son, Marc, is too young to be much of an authority, but his nickname for his globe-trotting mother is Mimi Hong Kong.

As a food scout, she must eat the local dishes; as a tourist, she thinks it's a healthful idea.

"I think it's a mistake to eat anything but a native food, based on local products and necessities. You run less risk eating a native dish, overlooked by our standards, than you would by insisting on American-style foods, underdone by their local customs."

Date with a Valentine
Make a date with your eating public for a special Valentine's day breakfast. Roll biscuit dough thin, spread with melted butter; sprinkle with brown sugar, cinnamon and sliced fresh California dates. Roll up and slice thinly. A poke on one side of each roll, a pinch opposite will shape into hearts as you place on baking sheet. Bake until browned in hot oven. Drizzle with thin powdered sugar frosting, if you wish, and serve hot.

Food Scout Must Eat Strange, Exotic Foods

By JEANNE LESEM
United Press International
New York—(UPI)—Mimi Sheraton, a food scout, has eaten sheep's feet in Lebanon, and bears' paws in Hong Kong.

But she avoided spit-roasted fox in Greenland.

Not because her spirit of adventure was flagging. She had been warned that at the fox might carry rabies.

This didn't faze local Eskimos, she added, who breakfasted on the fox and American chocolate bars.

As a free lance food scout for several leading New York restaurants, Miss Sheraton also has sampled stews (skewered broiled marinated meat and poultry) at open-air stands in Singapore, shared native meals in many Asian homes and watched Russian chefs at work in Moscow restaurants.

Her culinary research covered four months and more than a dozen countries in Europe and Asia. Modified versions of the recipes she brought back eventually will appear on the menus at eateries run by Restaurant Associates, Inc.

Cooking Make Kin
Cooking apparently makes the whole world kin, regardless of politics. Miss Sheraton said in an interview that Russian chefs appeared delighted at her interest and willingly conducted cooking demonstrations in their kitchens. She found their recipes interesting and the portions generous, but food preparation "not always what it should be."

The Asian food she sampled was more exotic, by American standards. In Lebanon, she also ate steamed snails dipped into sesame oil and pureed chick peas, kibbeh (raw ground lamb kneaded with oil and bulgur, a parched, crushed lentil and tabbouleh, made of chopped parsley, bulgur, tomatoes and garlic).

In Turkey she ate dinner kebabs, barbecued lamb done on a vertical spit before an

A dozen or so students do well in the smaller roles which are necessary to spice a successful musical comedy. There is also an especially lively and well-trained dancing chorus and it seemed to this reporter that the chorus this year has achieved a more polished vocal ensemble effect than in past years.

The cast is large and the stage not really adequate for such a production, but in spite of these difficulties, Director Lynn Sjolund and his numerous assistants achieved a smooth production.

Warren Wolf of the school faculty designed the set and John Drysdale coached the orchestra which played the overture and background music. Colleen Hope was responsible for the choreography of the dances, and trained the dance chorus, with Sandra Laing assisting. Mrs. Ruth Hoekersmith assisted with costumes, which are colorful as well as sometimes amusing, particularly for the "When the Idle Poor Become the Idle Rich" scene.

Gary Lovre, the pianist, and Virginia Derickson, organist, are the accompanists.

A few roles are double cast, and the second cast will give tonight's performance. Saturday night will see last night's performers returning for the final production. Curtain time is 8 p.m. and reserved seats are still available. O.S.

Mothers' Club Discusses Show
The annual hobby show was discussed at a meeting of West Side Mothers' club held February 8 in the school cafeteria. Mrs. R. E. Watson, president, presided.

Members interested in legislative measures concerning education were urged to obtain informative materials from the school office.

Various ideas as to how the annual spring hobby show might be improved or broadened were discussed.

Plans were made to furnish the teachers' lounge and install floodlights for the parking area.

The American Cancer Society film, "Breast Self-Examination," was shown. Dr. John T. Brandenburg held a question and answer period following the film.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Leonard Carlson, Mrs. Ellis Chantier and Mrs. William Salade.
