

Duncan Predicts Two Welfare Hearings Pave Way For Constructive Solution by State Legislature

Salem — (UPI) — Spokesmen for Gov. Mark Hatfield and the public welfare commission banded charges of "mismanagement" and "gross distortion" Tuesday night — but key legislators agreed a second welfare hearing ended with no heroes and no villains, just a number of welfare problems.

House Speaker Robert Duncan of Medford predicted the three-hour hearing, and the four-hour one last week, had cleared the way for the legislature to "proceed to a constructive solution."

State and Federal Affairs Committee Chairman Norman Howard (D-Portland) and Republican Minority Leader F. F. Montgomery of Eugene agreed the sessions had pointed up trouble spots where improvements could be made in welfare.

Howard and Duncan indicated there was little chance the legislature would go all the way with Hatfield's plan to abolish the commission. "There is always an area of compromise," Howard said after the hearing, "possibly in making the administrator, rather than the commissioner, accountable to the governor."

Welfare Administrator Jeanne Jewett said she administered a tightly regulated and efficient program that was continuing to make "outstanding and administrative improvements."

She said "administrative competence" was reflected in low Oregon case loads, increased federal grants, and improved collections.

Commission members said they stood behind Miss Jewett, and called her a woman of competence and courage. Several hundred people attended the hearing. Mrs. John Hall, member of the Lincoln County Welfare Commission and wife of the former governor, lashed at the state group for treating county agencies as "mere puppets" and "rubber stamps."

Commissioner Gerson Goldsmith denied the charge but added, if the governor takes charge of welfare, "what is the state commission going to be?"

Both Goldsmith and Hatfield's aide, Warne Nunn, however, made a move for conciliation.

"I hope this has cleared the air," Goldsmith said, "so problems that have existed between the governor's office and the welfare commission can be worked out."

Nunn, referring to compromise proposals by Duncan and Senate President Harry Boivin (D-Klamath Falls) as well as to Hatfield's reorganization plan, said:

"We favor the cabinet structure, but hope you will pass some legislation that will provide the vehicle for improvements in administration that we feel are needed."

James Pullman, chairman of the Jackson County Welfare Commission, voiced opinions of several witnesses when he said he felt there was "room for improvement" in the state agency.

Commissioner Joseph Harvey said he felt the weight of evidence supported a transfer of the commission from Portland to Salem.

ROCKETS BURN UP
Washington — (UPI) — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has announced the rocket which launched Russia's Venus probe apparently has reentered the earth's atmosphere. NASA said also Tuesday its tracking information has shown the rocket which fired a 7 1/2 ton Soviet sputnik into orbit Feb. 4 has burned up in the earth's atmosphere.

Since their public display by the museum in 1933 the figures have been the object of considerable suspicion by archaeologists. The distrust of experts was finally confirmed by the investigations of Joseph V. Noble, operating administra-

Metropolitan Art Museum Confesses Forgeries Shown

New York — (UPI) — The Metropolitan Museum of Art has confessed sadly that three "major Etruscan sculptures" which have thrilled laymen and intrigued experts for the past 30 years are forgeries.

James J. Rorimer, director of the museum, said the entire room was devoted almost entirely to them, were the creation of a 20th Century forger. They supposedly dated from about 500 B.C.

Impressive Size
The objects are three terracotta figures of warriors of impressive size and heroic attitude. The first is a helmeted head nearly five feet high. The other two are figures eight feet and six feet high. They weigh 800 and 500 pounds respectively.

They will for the moment remain on display, but with a notice describing their reduced circumstances. The museum officials did not explain why it took them nearly 30 years before checking on the authenticity of the sculptures.

tor of the museum and an expert on ceramics.

He proved that the black glaze on the statues was produced not by an ancient Greek oxidizing method but by the modern dyeing agent manganese dioxide.

Deliberately Broken
It also appeared that the statues had been deliberately broken into many fragments before they were placed in the firing ovens to support their authenticity when they were presented for the appraisal of museum experts.

The museum would not disclose what the figures had cost nor where they had been obtained. But it is known that the price was high and it is assumed they came from Italy.

The museum officials did not explain why it took them nearly 30 years before checking on the authenticity of the sculptures.

Neuberger Likes Mill at Gardiner

Panama City, Fla. — (UPI) — Sen. Maurine Neuberger (D-Ore.), Tuesday gave her blessings to a pulp mill by International Paper Co. on the Southern Oregon coast near Gardiner. The mill would be near the proposed Oregon Dunes National Seashore.

She came here to study a paper mill project similar to the one planned for Oregon, expressing fear that waste from the mill might injure recreational areas. But after touring the International mill here, she said her fears were allayed.

"I think the mill will be an aid to natural resources," she said. "I like the company's plans for dams which help fresh water fishing."

OSC Research Vessel Launched at Portland

Portland — (UPI) — Oregon State college had its own "Navy" today.

An 80-foot ocean-going research vessel built at a cost of $180,000 was launched here Monday.

The vessel, called the Acona, was constructed under a grant from the Office of Naval Research which picked Oregon State as one of 10 schools to study waters along the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts. The ship will be based at Newport.

ADDRESSES WORKERS

With a big smile on his face, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev speaks at a conference of leading agricultural workers of the Trans-Caucasian Republic at Tbilisi, Russia. Russia announced Tuesday that it would no longer recognize Dag Hammarskjold as U.N. secretary-general and called for withdrawal of UN troops from the Congo in one month. (UPI Telephoto)

Insurance Fraud Try Brings 10-Year Term

Los Angeles — (UPI) — Richard E. Loomis, 45, a former Air Force major, was sentenced to one to 10 years in prison Tuesday for conspiring to crash a plane to collect on a $50,000 insurance policy. James Keith Gibbs, 32, a pilot, was killed when the British Mosquito war surplus bomber crashed July 1, 1957. The prosecution charged Gibbs had planned to destroy the craft in an insurance fraud.

Your new weight control program... a balanced food that tastes good

For the first time, here is a balanced food for your weight control program so delicious you'd almost expect it to add pounds! Choose either of two luscious flavors: smooth chocolate, delicate vanilla. Choose both, and change off!

And enjoy extra convenience: just stir one packet of Subtract in a cup of water for a single delicious serving. No measuring, no muss. So easy to carry in pocket or purse to use, wherever you might be.

Cartons contain either one or three-day supplies for a 900-calorie diet. Four packets, one day's supply, provide protein, vitamins and minerals in amounts that meet or exceed the average man's minimum daily requirements. Use it as your complete day's food intake, one packet to replace each meal, a fourth as a late-evening snack. Or for more leisurely weight loss, substitute Subtract for just one or two meals a day.

The overweight person who undertakes a weight control program should consult his doctor concerning his general health, the speed at which reduction should be accomplished, and the final weight which is desirable.

Each packet contains a quarter of your day's food requirements with only 225 calories. Available in cartons of one or three-day supplies for the 900-calorie dieter.
