

State Files Suits For Right of Way

A series of condemnation suits were filed recently in Jackson county circuit court on behalf of the state highway commission for rights-of-way for the new Highway 99 freeway.

One suit is seeking 6.92 acres from Helen T. and Benice B. King on Table Rock rd. Alfred and Laura Jensen claim some interest in the property. No rights of access will be allowed between the right-of-way and the property. The commission has set a "true value" of $10,000 on the property.

Another suit seeks two parcels of land, .66 acres and .18 acre, from Wayne and Eleanor S. Zurfluh for relocation of the Valley View rd., the Ashland lane connection and construction and maintenance of the north Ashland traffic interchange. The value has been estimated at $950 and includes an allowance of $108 for re-establishing a fence.

A third suit seeks 11.37 acres from James H. Nunes and Helen Nunes for a right-of-way for the Seven Oaks-Neil creek section of the new freeway. The property is on Glenwood rd., south of Medford. The commission has offered to construct a fence. True value of the property has been estimated at $7,800.

Personal Property Tax Aim of Bill

Salem - Sen. Walter J. Pearson late Friday proposed a bill for gradual abolition of the Oregon personal property tax. But he said it would probably mean an increase in taxation of real property.

Personal property is anything that isn't "nailed down," such as office furnishings and equipment. Real property is land and buildings.

The Senate Education committee, of which Pearson is a member, agreed to introduce it as a committee bill.

Assessed values on business inventories would be cut 20 per cent a year for five years. Since some of the burden would be shifted to homeowners—who pay real property taxes—Pearson suggests a two per cent cut in assessed values each year for five years.

The Portland Democrat said the amount of revenue derived from the property tax is not enough to warrant replacing it with another tax.

Institute To Hold Sessions at Phoenix

Phoenix - The Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies will conduct five educational sessions in atomic energy at the Phoenix High school, March 23.

Demonstration lectures will be presented to the entire student body, followed by more detailed and technical treatment in the various science classes.

The following units in atomic energy will be taught by instructors from Oak Ridge: atomic structure, isotopes, particle accelerators, radioactivity, fission, chain reaction, control of chain reaction, reactor parts, uses of reactors, radio-isotopes and their uses, nuclear fuels, and peacetime uses of atomic energy.

This is the second visit from Oak Ridge. The first visit was in 1958 when a representative spent one week in Phoenix.

Sanitarians To Attend OSC Course

The three Jackson county sanitarians plan to attend the 13th annual sanitarians' short course, March 28 to 30 at Oregon State college in Corvallis, according to Public Health Officer Dr. A. Erin Merkel.

Attending will be Chief Sanitarian Ori Moore, and Sanitarians William R. Dierick and George Runyan.

"The theme this year is based on the incorporation of a vector control program into the general sanitarians' activities," according to the Oregon state board of health. A vector is an organism, usually an insect, which carries and transmits disease-causing microorganisms. Primary purpose of the short course is to give a broad generalized picture of vector control activities which may be used by all sanitarians.

Sears Employees Share in Profits

Employees of the Sears, Roebuck and company store, 501 East Jackson st., Medford, now have a total of $187,987 credited to their accounts in the employees' profit sharing fund, according to the manager, R. Jacobson.

The 72 local fund members include employees of the retail store and of All-State Insurance companies, a wholly-owned subsidiary operation of Sears.

Jacobson said the holdings of local fund members included 2,485 shares of Sears stock and other securities amounting to $51,335 as of Dec. 31, the end of the fund's fiscal year.

All regular employees of the company who have completed one year's work are eligible to join the fund, the manager said. Members of the fund contribute 5 per cent of their wages and salaries, up to a maximum of $500 each year. The company contributes a portion of its net income. Its contribution is credited to members' accounts on a formula based on their age, length of service and deposits.

Timber Problems Topic of Meeting

Mutual problems in timber sales will be discussed at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday in the bureau of land management timber sales room in Medford, according to Robert Kline, Kline Logging company, Medford, chairman of the special committee of the Southern Oregon Conservation and Tree Farm association.

Foresters who plan and design the sales layouts on the public lands and foresters of firms who ultimately log these layouts will exchange ideas.

The conference has been designed to deal specifically with high-sales layout problems, Kline said, but other sales layout questions from logging operators will be discussed. All operators in southern Oregon have been invited to attend.

Representing the public agencies will be sales layout and administrative personnel from the Siskiyou, Rogue River, Umpqua and Klamath National forests and the bureau of land management.

Glenn Duxsen, chairman of the timber committee, SOU-C-TFA, reported that the regular February meeting of his committee has been cancelled in deference to this high-sales layout conference.

Gerald Charles Laizure, 4425 West Jacksonville highway, reported his car had been entered about the same time and at the same location but nothing was taken, apparently. Both men were employees of Payless Drug store.

The Family Council

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of an actual case history. Sara B. - They tell us never to give a present to one child, always both.

Mabel M. - We want to prevent jealousy between our daughters.

Sara B. - My sister and I brother-in-law have two little girls, one 4, the other 7. Since my husband and I travel around the country extensively, we come across interesting toys and souvenirs and like to mail them home to the children. But Mabel says that, unless we can send two identical tokens, not to send any.

We don't get it. The children are different ages, different types. The older one, Nancy, is graceful and petite, while the baby, Nelly, is chubby and muscular. Nancy is always dancing and singing, so we like to send her things like recordings and harmonicas, as well as Indian belts and Scottish kilts. For Nelly, we buy picture books and games.

Sometimes it's impossible to get duplicates of a gift. We can't understand Mabel's reason for treating her daughters like carbon copies of each other, when anyone can see they're completely different.

Mabel M. - My husband and I have seen too many examples of deep-rooted jealousy between brothers and sisters. We decided to try to avoid this with our children, from the start.

I can't worry about how this looks to others, including my sister who, I know, is really devoted to us and the girls. I'm more concerned with the effect of presents on the recipients, my children, than with the annoyance of the donors over my request to send two-at-a-time.

Josephine County Studies Food Pact

Grants Pass - Josephine county may soon become the first area in Oregon to join the federal food distribution program.

County Judge Raymond A. Lathrop of Grants Pass, a member of the State Welfare commission, said the county has agreed on all essential provisions of a food distribution contract with the State Department of Finance.

The number who will participate in the program is estimated at 3,000 persons in 1,000 families. The first 32 pound food packages will contain flour, rice, butter, corn meal, beans, peanut butter and canned pork and gravy.

not fair," they say. "When I was 4 I didn't get my own microscope. Why should he? I had to wait until I was 7?" They do like a few special nods toward their seniority.

But if it's character-training Mabel and her husband have in mind they'll get further by teaching a little giving-up when there's a shortage, rather than a divvying-up when there's a glut. It's harder on parents and children, of course. But it makes life easier and more rewarding later, this ability to sacrifice and share.

Suppose Aunt Sara buys the last "vinte escudo" stamp in the hotel, the night they leave Portugal. Nancy and Nelly can't share it. Who gets it? Can't Nelly be taught to be happy that Nancy, her sister, has it? And can't the sleek, if any, in Nelly's life

The Council: While the goal Mabel and her husband have in view is laudable, their method betrays some confusion on what constitutes "equal" treatment. No two individuals are so alike that you can limit them, willy-nilly, to the same kind of attention, even though you are careful to give them the same amount of attention.

These two little girls are learning to check up on whether Sister has something, but with no idea whether it's the right thing. It's like handling out sweaters to everyone in an office because the boss feels chilly. Some of them may need a fan.

Aunt Sara is right in asking her sister to examine the ruling which is so rigid and extreme as to be unrealistic in terms of life as these children will have to live it. They're not really learning to measure and compare. Unless they start from the same point and run to the same goal in the same time, they won't play.

There's another point, one which we've heard many times from the older or oldest of a group of siblings who receive identical treats. "It's be taken up in dozens of other ways? In other words, Mabel must prepare her daughters for the stark fact that some things can't be shared even-steven. (Not even Steven, if he's a boy friend!) Happiness comes not from ducking conflict, but from bucking it and coming to bearable terms.
