

Push Button Travel on Colored Roads Said Near

Sacramento, Calif. — (UPI) — Push button travel on rainbow colored freeways may be closer than you think, but just how close is up to the California legislature.

Assemblyman Nicholas C. Petris (D-Oakland) has introduced bills that would require a push button speed control system in every car. The buttons, all different colors, would activate a governor to hold the car in any one of five speed ranges between zero and 65 miles an hour.

Matching colored lights at front and rear of the automobile would tell other motorists and police how fast it was going. Speed zones and highway lanes would be covered with luminous paint in the same color scheme, Petris said.

The colors would be as follows: Red to 15 miles an hour, green to 25, yellow to 40, blue to 55 and white to 65.

Petris said the idea belonged to Nicholas Demetry of Oakland, who announced it publicly in 1957 with a letter to the President of the United States. Since then Petris continued, Demetry has travelled over the nation talking with safety experts, government officials and newspaper editors.

THE COURT HELD

Adverse Possession Changes Boundary Line

Asa and Bob are next-door neighbors. In 1941 Asa planted a hedge along what he thought was the boundary line between his lot and Bob's lot. The hedge was in fact located on Bob's land eight feet from the true boundary. Asa treated all of the land up to the hedge as part of his lawn from 1940 to 1961. In 1961, Bob, after learning about the location of the original true line from a survivor, decided to tear out the hedge. Can Asa prevent Bob from removing the hedge?

THE COURT HELD: Asa has acquired eight feet of Bob's lot by adverse possession and the hedge now forms the boundary between the two lots. Therefore, at Asa's request, the court enjoined Bob from removing the hedge. A person acquires title to land when he possesses and claims title to it for a prescribed period. The period is set by state law and varies from five to 20 years. (Based on 132 N. E. 348, Mass.)

OF SMITH & MEN

By Jack Smith
(c) 1960 — Times-Mirror Syndicate

One of the blessings of married life is a wife who has the habit of interrupting her husband, when he's reading, to read something to him from whatever it is she's reading.

It's even more rewarding if, instead of reading to him verbatim, she condenses everything. It saves a lot of time, although something may be lost in clarity.

The other evening I was curled up with "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich" when my wife interrupted. She was curled up with some magazine.

"The latest thing in psychiatry," she said, "—oh! were you reading?"

"No," I said. "I was just looking for pictures of atrocities. There don't seem to be any."

"Family therapy," she said. "It's the newest thing in psychiatric treatment. The whole family has analysis, instead of only the person who's ill. There's an article here about it."

"We can't afford it," I said. "We still owe the orthodontist."

"The psychiatrist has to analyze all the members of the family to understand their interactions," she explained. "It tells about this family that had therapy. A mother and father and daughter."

"What was their trouble?" I asked.

"The father was an advertising agency man," she said. "The mother was over-adequate. The father was too passive. The daughter had an overattachment to the mother."

"So they all went to the psychiatrist as a package?" I asked.

"Yes," she said. "Their problems were inter-related. The mother and daughter blamed each other for everything. They fought viciously. They couldn't disengage."

"Why didn't the father knock some sense in their heads?"

"He was merely a spectator. His agency was slipping, and he came down with colitis. He felt more inadequate than ever."

"Poor devil," I said. "How'd it all work out?"

"It took over two years," she went on. "Finally the daughter managed to disengage from the mother."

"Disengage?"

"Yes. She moved out of the house and got her own little place."

"Good for her," I said. "Somehow I had sensed that was the answer to the whole trouble. 'How'd the folks take that?'"

"At first the mother was hysterical. But she got over it. She ran away on a vacation by herself. The father was calm at first. But then he got sick. He got well at a convention. Eventually the mother and father re-engaged."

"And they're all happy now?"

"Not exactly happy. The mother and daughter aren't completely disengaged, and the mother and father aren't completely re-engaged. They don't quite trust each other. But they're making progress. The daughter has a job."

"And they've all given up the psychiatrist?"

"Oh, no. They all still go to

Northrup Library Plans Expansion

McMinnville — A $300,000 expansion program for Northrup library on the Linfield college campus has been announced by Dr. Harry L. Dillin, Linfield president.

Plans call for expansion of the present 10,400 square feet of space by another 13,000 square feet. The three story addition will be built on the back of the present building.

Dr. Dillin said that in addition to some funds now available, plans are being made to finance the addition through a campaign among interested givers and that applications were being made to four foundations, one of which already has given $19,000.

ENLISTS

Richard R. Crowley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Crowley, 704 North Oregon st., Jacksonville, recently enlisted in the Air Force. He is now stationed at Lackland Air Force base, San Antonio, Tex. He was graduated from Medford High school in 1960.

There's no place like SAFEWAY for BEEF

This week, while this big BEEF SALE is going on, is a perfect time for you to learn why folks in this area say, "There's no place like Safeway for Beef."

Actually, it's the combination of things we do that makes Safeway beef better. We start with USDA Choice Beef, the grade which means top flavor, tenderness and juiciness. Then, in our-own climate-controlled aging rooms this beef is aged to perfection. Finally, to give you more fine eating meat for your money, each cut is carefully trimmed before weighing.

These are the things which make it possible for us to guarantee perfect eating. Money back without return of the meat if any cut of Safeway meat should ever fail to please.
