

Ullman Expects OK For Bill To Assist Destitute Children

By YVONNE FRANKLIN
Mail Tribune Washington Bureau

Washington (Special)—Rep. Al Ullman believes chances are "excellent" that his committee, Ways and Means, will pass for House action by April 1 a change in the Aid to Dependent Children law to provide money for children whose fathers are unemployed.

according to Ullman, destitute children living with two able-bodied unemployed parents are penalized.

"Under existing law," said Ullman, "we are actually encouraging the fathers to leave home so that their children can become eligible for dependent aid. This problem is highlighted during times of extended unemployment such as we are going through now."

Said Sound Policy
"It seems to me that it is not only in the interests of justice but it is sound administration policy that we should recognize unemployment as one of the reasons that children are suffering and in need under the act."

"If a father runs out of unemployment insurance, he applies to welfare for assistance. But a lot of men just will not apply; they will leave home first. The public assistance laws are so variable around the country and so stringent and funds are so short that the chances of getting public assistance are being narrowed more and more every day," he continued.

There are 6,092 families, involving 16,672 children, now participating in the Oregon program. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare reports that for November, 1960, the average payment per Oregon family was $145.99 (the average per person is $40.60). If the bill becomes law, the local departments of public welfare would handle the applications for assistance.

The January unemployment figures for Oregon showed that 65,300 people were unemployed out of a total labor force of 700,300. Of these, the Labor department estimated that approximately 390,000 are covered by some form of unemployment compensation.

Broadening of the aid to dependent children program to include children of employable fathers is only temporary, extending to June 30, 1962. Ullman feels that it should be permanent. He was the first member of Congress to propose such extension of the law during the 1958 recession year.

Wants Permanent Change
"I favor a permanent extension of the law to cover this feature, and would expect that the Administration will later present to the Congress a proposal for a permanent change," he said.

Ullman also feels that the bill helps to meet an ever growing need.

"We cannot allow the children to suffer who are dependents of people not able to work and who have gone beyond their unemployment benefits. This is the whole intent of the law. We should hold families together rather than encouraging, in the law itself, the breaking up of families," he said.

Ullman feels that Oregon has a better than average record on aid to the unemployed, considering the nation as a whole. For the week ending Feb. 4, 1961, the Labor department lists 44,105 people in Oregon at a winning unemployment compensation, which is up 12,923 from a year ago.

The first lighthouse on the American coast was built at Beaver Tail off Jamestown, R. I., in the middle of the 18th century.

(Written for UPI)

What man must face in life and what he wills to accept involve two different forces of his being. When Jesus decided to spend the final days of His life in Jerusalem, He did it with the awareness that all the hostile spirits operating within man would have to be encountered. This decision was not forced upon Him; He went out to meet it as an opportunity in which He might make the God and Father of His people known to them.

Jesus knew that to accept life as we find it is to frustrate life as it is meant to be. He "set His face to go to Jerusalem" because He knew that the forces of evil must be met by the friendship of God. Evil is not to be destroyed. Evil is to be transformed. Man is called of God to make something out of life.

It is our Father's will to give us the kingdom. We do not have to bring it in. We are asked to act and live within the will and ways of the kingdom. It is a most precarious gift. We must go through the city of entrenched evil forces. The cross is inescapable.

It is in such conditions that life becomes really redemptive. Men struggle against God and good when they have lost the image of the Father, who gives life, love and meaning to their existence.

Jesus said: "For this cause came I into the world." And again: "The Father is with Me." His cause was not so much a matter of death as it was the revelation of life. The world is not transformed by our dying, but by our willingness to live. By the new life which is brought into being when God lives in the human soul. The saviors of the world accept life as they find it, but they always leave a new sense of God the Father in the hearts of those who learn to love them.
