Hail Study Here Said Productive; Will Continue

A progress report of the hail study program in the Rogue valley during the past year was given last week at a meeting of the Year Shipper's association by Dr. Fred Decker, Corvallis. Although a hail suppression program was first started in the valley in 1949, cloud seeding has not been done during the last several years of the hail study program, Decker explained.

During the two year study program which started last year, approximately $50,000 is being spent by the fruit-growers, National Science foundation and the Oregon Experiment station program. Dr. Decker said that the study during the past year has been considered quite "productive" and is expected to continue basically the same this year.

The program has included the study of cloud formations by two radar units, hail stone sampling tests, and hail stone collection. Dr. Decker said that several foreign countries are ahead of the United States in hail research and a Swiss scientist may be in Oregon later this year to confer with him. Speaking about the local program Dr. Decker reminded residents that the program will again need local cooperation for hail stone collection this year. Residents participate by collecting the hail stones and noting the start and stop of storms.

Firemen Rescue Boy From Barbecue Grill

Medford firemen answered the call of a young man in distress Saturday. Alec Dumas, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Murray Dumas, 15 Renault ave., was in a jam in more ways than one. The boy was stuck in the chimney of the family barbecue grill. Firemen said he had been standing in the chimney when the damper caved in, putting him in deeper trouble.

Firemen report they were enthusiastically welcomed. The only casualty was a pair of pants which dropped slightly in the extracting process.

Chains Necessary on Several Oregon Routes

Pickin' Pears

By WALTER TOWNSEND On Monday, Feb. 20, a recent world-traveler with his projector and slides came to the domiciliary, where Albert C. Allen Jr., of Central Point showed what he termed his "Travel Pictures of Europe." Allen, a well-known boat-builder on the Rogue river, spent five months in Europe between July and September, 1960. He was impressed with the friendliness of the people he met. And greatly surprised at how progressive were the people in Germany, and other countries of northern Europe.

The economic conditions in Spain made it different from most places, he said. Still the people were anxious to please the tourist, and seemed to make it their chief business. Accompanied on Trip During his visit to Europe in the summer months, he was accompanied by his wife and three other couples, all of whom live in the Rogue valley. Mr. and Mrs. Almus Pruitt; Mr. and Mrs. Angus Bowmer ("father of the Shakespeare Festival" at Ashland); and Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Miller.

Among the visitors and members in the station theater who heard the travel lecture, and saw the slides, were Mrs. Jenny Creager, Mrs. Orville Belveal, Mrs. Fred Rehling, Mrs. Robert Barnes, Mrs. George Pitts, Mrs. Mamie Bloomfield, Mrs. A. T. Wattenburg, Miss Victoria Tavener, and Mrs. Lillian Salade.

"None of the countries in Europe are as well off as we are," Allen said. Conditions in Austria were apparently prosperous. Especially in the cities. But out in the country, their ways of life were quite backward.

Automobiles are becoming a problem in the larger towns. England is becoming more and more industrialized. Feeling was good. No animosity or enmity were noted, even in Germany.

As a boatbuilder himself, he said they were an index of recreation, with gas prices 60 to 80 cents a gallon in Europe. A loaf of bread could be obtained for only a few cents, and groceries, as a whole, were quite reasonable in price.

Allen was introduced to the members and visitors by the Chief Librarian Enid Holmes. His first slide was a glimpse of the continent of Europe in Antwerp, Holland - showing sunset over the low countries, and a Dutch castle still being used.

Long gray dismal winters are followed by lots of flowers, he said. Vast fields of begonias caught the eye. Then he showed Germany, where beautiful roads unwound between Bremen and Hamburg. "A broad freeway, like we have in America," was his comment as he put in the slide.

Pictures of Denmark, with many pictures showing of Eistnor Castle where Hamlet lived, followed. "The Danish people were very progressive," he explained, going back to the Castle built in 1200 A.D.

His slides on Sweden showed electric trains for nearly all transportation. Swarms of bicycles and many dogs colored the street scenes. "Dogs have a definite part in the social system," he said. "You can take a dog in your hotel," he added.

Changing of guard in Stockholm made the theater audience hold its breath. Some of the modern stores and beautiful window displays, brought a gasp or two.

Norway was up in the mountains, with lakes everywhere. There were no boats, no water skiing, no fishing, and little outdoor advertising to clutter up national scenery on highways. Washington, Oregon and British Columbia are very similar to Norway, he said.

Deep water comes in 50 miles from the sea, again like British Columbia, and snow is on the peaks of mountains far away.

His party of eight drove their little bus into Bergen. A street scene includes trucks, cars, some horses, and flowers for sale on the sidewalks. A bouquet of flowers was seen on a truck driver. He saw a colorful fish market of halibut, the largest halibut Allen had ever seen, he said.

Allen paused to comment, "Veal is the principal meat all through Europe." From Bergen, the party of four couples, sailed for England. Before leaving, he took pictures of the home of Edward Greig - just out of Bergen. This famous composer lived in a Scandinavian country, famed for its buckskin horse. Draft Horses New Castle, England, appeared all at once, where a lot of draft horses are still in use, where people drive on the left hand side.

London Gardens with its beautiful flowers, was shown. Striped brooms are used all over England made of sticks, he noted. Bomb damage was shown, as was a picture of the Beef Eater on the way to Tower, Big Ben, a clock, and the old chimney pots, appeared for a moment, and a cottage in Stratford, where Ann Hathaway lived, brought a sort of nostalgia to some of the audience who saw the slides.

Edenborough, Scotland, and Lochloman lakes was shown. "No supermarkets," he said, "all nearly small stores in England." "A highway turn-out is a 'lay-by' in England," he remarked, showing a resting spot in the road. Tulips for Export Belgium caught the eye, with tulips for export. More fields of begonia flowers were shown.

Then on to Bonn, Germany, which had flowers, too, and The Rhine winding down through its high banks, with broad highway, bridges and barges everywhere.

Hidberg and sunset, with blazing red lights all night. Sawmills are operated without burners. And lumber is stacked where it leaves the mill. Switzerland is hidden back from the plain. Cities have eye-catching window displays. "Makes you want to buy something - whether you need it or not," he commented as he put in another slide on Chalon Castle, where Lord Byron wrote his great poem. Crosses into Austria The party crossed into Austria, and down into Liechtenstein, where there are no taxes. But where it costs $14,000 to become a citizen, in order to enjoy their tax-free life.

The cost of transportation for eight people in their little bus, traveling 13,700 miles, was 1 1/2 cents a mile. Allen drove the bus, having previously obtained, before leaving America, an International Driving License, through the AAA. It gave him a right to drive in all of the countries of Europe they visited.

The living cost for two people, during the five months, was approximately $15 a day for meals and room. "I had a wonderful time in my tour of Europe," Allen said at the end of his picture showing, "but there are a lot of things and places I want to see in America - next trip."

Mt. Ashland Ski Area Said To Have 'Finest Potential'

Ashland - Robert Haworth, Medford and Jackson county parks and recreation director, told Ashland Rotarians recently that the north slope of Mt. Ashland "... has the finest potential that I have seen." During the session, the recreation spokesman discussed county recreation development - Howard Prairie, Emigrant lake, and Willow Creek lake. He said the amount of work completed has been "impressive" despite the handicap of lack of funds.

On Mt. Ashland, Haworth said, after inspecting both proposed ski sites, that "... the Mt. Ashland site is superior." He also referred to his 10 years of operating ski schools and the fact that Southern Oregon college ski classes have been conducted on the Ashland mountain.

The large population of ski enthusiasts in the immediate vicinity was named an advantage for development of the Mt. Ashland site.

Regarding Howard Prairie, Haworth reviewed the possibilities of the area as experienced with winter ice skating. He noted that a proposed floating dock facility is now nearing construction. He blamed slow development on the fact that the county did not receive control of the property until Nov. 1.

Speaking of Emigrant lake, Haworth said the 960-acre water surface will be primarily a water sports area and a floating dock is also proposed for use there. Chief problem here, he continued, is the fluctuation of the water level during the summer season. He noted that the county planning commission is investigating the situation at the lake.

Willow Creek lake was said to offer possibilities for recreational development, although the problem of working out a plan for the operation of both publicly and privately owned lake front property is apparent.

Wrong Person Cited In Sunday's Story

Medford police Saturday cited Merl Ebbe, 59, Portland, for violation of the basic rule, following a two-car accident on Highway 99 near Lynn st. The Mail Tribune incorrectly reported Sunday that police had cited the driver of the other vehicle, Elvin Miles Pershall, 50, of 123 Manzanita st. Pershall and a passenger in the Ebbe vehicle sustained apparently minor injuries in the crash.

Freeman Urges Help for Jobless

Washington - (UPI) - Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman urged Congress today to pass a depressed areas bill which he said "gets to the heart of the problem of rural poverty." "The main thing this bill will do is to provide credit where it is most needed to start or expand useful, job-creating enterprises," he said. Freeman was the first witness today to discuss the $389 million loan and grant program during hearings before a House banking subcommittee. The so-called area redevelopment bill is one of the administration's top priority legislative programs.

Freeman Urges Help for Jobless

Washington - (UPI) - Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman urged Congress today to pass a depressed areas bill which he said "gets to the heart of the problem of rural poverty." "The main thing this bill will do is to provide credit where it is most needed to start or expand useful, job-creating enterprises," he said. Freeman was the first witness today to discuss the $389 million loan and grant program during hearings before a House banking subcommittee. The so-called area redevelopment bill is one of the administration's top priority legislative programs.
