Haworth Discusses Parks, Recreation Program at Rotary

Robert Haworth, Medford and Jackson county parks and recreation director, discussed the programs of the city and the county at a meeting of the Rotary club this week.

In 1959, Haworth was hired by the city to administer its parks and recreation program. Increased activity in this area by the county resulted in his hiring by the county to administer its program, too.

Haworth said there are about 50 acres of developed park land for Medford residents. The bureau of municipal research, he explained, recommend 1 acre per 100 people and the city currently has 1 acre for 300 people.

The schools in the area were complemented by Haworth as he reviewed the cooperation of the parks department and schools in providing programs for Medford residents. He also said the YMCA, Camp Fire Girls, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other agencies cooperate in providing programs.

Haworth explained that activities in the county currently center on two developments: Howard Prairie and Emigrant lakes.

He mentioned that more than 1,000 people were at Howard Prairie lake last year for the opening day of fishing. This year a crowd of 5,000 is expected. Emigrant lake will not be stocked with fish this year, he explained, but the state game commission is cooperating in developing this facility.

Answering questions from the Rotarians, Haworth commented that the increasing number of tourists, increasing amount of leisure time of adults and transportation has a distinct bearing on the area's economy and development of recreation areas.

In discussing Prescott park, he said the poison oak problem there is being worked on at the present, and the development of this area is being planned. Referring to vandalism, he said that in 1½ years the city has spent only $600 on damage, which, according to Haworth, is an exceptionally fine record.

Also on the program were Art Savard and Herb Partridge representing the Kiwanis club. Savard and Partridge told the group about the Kiwanis Kapers at the high school March 8, 9, 10 and 11. Savard is president of the Kiwanis club, and Partridge is general chairman of the Kapers.

Pearson Tax Plan Said 'Sugar Coated'

Salem – (UPI) – Sen. Robert W. Straub, Oregon Democratic chairman, Tuesday described a tax plan offered by Sen. Walter Pearson as a "sugar coated sales tax."

Pearson and Sen. Boyd Overhulse have introduced a constitutional amendment that would be voted on by the people in 1962. It would prescribe a millage rate of no more than three per cent for a sales tax were enacted later, it would be thus restricted.

Pearson is a long-time foe suggested that the legislature should put various proposals before the voters and let them decide.

Straub reaffirmed traditional opposition of Democrats to a sales tax.

Under Pearson's bill, should a sales tax be approved in the future, the tax would offset property and income taxes would be used for schools.

Francis T.—I want to move back to town so Vernon can be home early each day.

Vernon T. — I think I'm home the right amount. I enjoy the suburbs.

* * *

Francis T.—I love my husband and I'm an old-fashioned believer in as much togetherness as possible. But living way out here, with his business in the heart of Manhattan, cuts at least three hours a day off the time Vernon can spend with me and the children. So I'm eager to move to the city.

* * *

Vernon T.—I like it this way. One reason Frances and the kids love me so much, as she claims, is that they don't see me when I'm frothing at the mouth about my business. There's such a thing as too much togetherness, where people see the cranky side of each other more than is necessary.

Besides, I like commuting. Usually I get a nice quiet hour to read my paper on the train, or I have an interesting chat with a fellow-commuter. I enjoy my friends in the neighborhood, and our home is more spacious and comfortable than a city apartment would be.

Also, Frances is mistaken if she thinks I'd be home more in town—quite the contrary. It would be a terrible temptation to just keep working at the office, since there's no train to catch, just the subway. And I know I'd stop in "to catch up" over the week end, too.

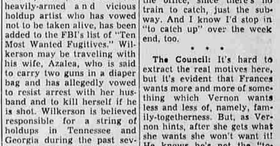
* * *

The Council: It's hard to extract the real motives here, but it's evident that Frances wants more and more of something which Vernon wants less and less of, namely, family-togetherness. But, as Vernon hints, after she gets what she wants she won't want it! He knows he's not the "together-ness type."

Although Frances makes a good case for life in the metropolis, we agree that this particular family is better off, for the present, dominated by Vernon's A.M. dash for the 7:19. While the children can't have many joint projects with their father during the week, there's still Sunday. And the brief evening glimpses and interchanges may be no less than those in homes where Dad's around all day. If Vernon makes it a point to have some communion with his youngsters each day, a good relationship can be achieved.

But the real issue here, we feel, is not country vs city life, but Frances vs. Vernon on how much of each other's company the other should have. It's true that the suburbs keep mates apart. A French sociologist blames suburban life for divorce, saying ...ates are deprived of each other's company because of the wife's community activities and the husband's commuting. However, a man like Vernon who dreads over-domestication, would n't be around the house much in the city, either.

No, Vernon is pleading the case for sympathetic and judicious "apartness," and he has something there. We commend to Frances's attention the ditto by Prof. Charles Frankel of Columbia University: "The real secret of family life is a little separateness. Few families have ever got along if their members did not occasionally have a chance to be alone."



MAKES FBI LIST–Jack Wilkerson, above, described as a heavily-armed and vicious holdup artist who has vowed not to be taken alive, has been added to the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives." Wilkerson may be traveling with his wife, Azalea, who is said to carry two guns in a diaper bag and has allegedly vowed to resist arrest with her husband and to kill herself if he is shot. Wilkerson is believed responsible for a string of holdups in Tennessee and Georgia during the past several months. (UPI Telephoto)

Women, Children To Be Hearing Topic

Salem – (UPI) – A conference board looking into a state wage and hour commission order involving the employment of women and children in mercantile establishments will meet in Portland Thursday.

The meeting will start at 10 a.m. in room 36 of the state office building.

The board makes recommendations to the commission, headed by Mrs. Eugene S. Kelty.

PEARSON APOLOGIZES

Salem – (UPI) – Sen. Walter J. Pearson Tuesday made a public apology on the floor of the Senate to Rep. Edward J. Whelan for describing Whelan Monday as a labor lobbyist.
