Six Advanced Training Classes Are Scheduled

Medford is included in a series of six advanced police training classes planned for city and county police officers in 15 Oregon cities during the next two months, according to Robert E. Moulton, police training consultant with the bureau of municipal research and service, University of Oregon.

FBI instructors will conduct the first class in Coos Bay today and will meet with local police officers in Roseburg, Medford, Klamath Falls, Bend, Albany, Salem, McMinnville, Astoria, Oregon City, The Dalles, Pendleton, Baker, Ontario and Eugene during the next three weeks.

Subjects and instructors of the other five classes are police lineup and roadblocks, Kenneth E. Allen, chief criminal deputy, Lane county sheriff's office; Eugene, scientific aids for investigation, Lt. Manual J. Boyes and Sgt. Ralph W. Proulx, Oregon State police; firearms training, Lt. Orlo McGee, Medford police department; police and the mentally ill, Lt. Thomas Simmons, Portland bureau of police; interviews, confession and signed statements, Sgt. Dale Allen, Eugene police department.

Advanced police training courses are held annually throughout the state. A total of 678 police officers of cities, counties, and other law enforcement agencies attended classes last spring, and certificates were awarded to 493.
