Let's Draw a Starfish

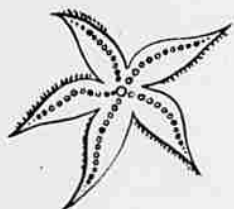

By Ann Davidow

Draw this pretty flower;

Add dots and it will be

A starfish that goes swishing
On the bottom of the sea.

Bumpity-Bump

By Ransom Moore

Mark a large circle (six to nine feet in diameter) on the ground. Two players stand inside the circle at opposite sides. They stand on one foot and keep their arms folded. Then they start to hop toward each other. Each wants to bump the other out of the circle. But each must do this without putting down his foot, using his hands, or falling over. The one who does, loses. Then two more players try Bumpity-Bump!

Handcuff Game

By Jane McHenry

Here's a good way to break the ice at parties. Seat two people on opposite sides of a small table. Tie their right wrists together with string, leaving a 10-inch length between them.

Give each one a plate of ice cream (or cooled soup), a spoon, and, after having them put their free hand behind their backs, tell them to eat. Unless there is careful coordination, this can be anywhere from hilarious to disastrous. If the party is large, set up two couples at a time.
