The music meet, one of the largest of its kind in the west, was held Saturday on the campus of Sacramento State college. It included high school vocal and instrumental groups from all of central California.

Commission Seeks Second DA Opinion About Pear Trees

The Jackson county planning commission has requested a second district attorney's opinion regarding a proposed regulation requiring removal of all pear trees from subdivisions, County Judge Earl M. Miller said Friday.

The request, made through the county court, explained that the removal is necessary due to possible spread of blight from neglected trees. County Horticultural Agent Clifford B. Cordy brought the request to the planning commission again recently and requested that such a regulation be included in the subdivision ordinance now in effect.

An opinion rendered by former Chief Deputy District Attorney Gerald Scannell last July said this is a matter more for zoning and should not come under a subdivision ordinance.

"However, it would seem logical to place this control under a subdivision ordinance rather than zoning," the planning commission letter stated. "Such control should be exercised over pear trees on individual lots as blight can seriously affect commercial orchards."

Pear growers had recommended the amendment. The county horticultural agent said that pear trees are not good shade trees for homes since this area has a pear psylla infestation problem. This insect causes a honeydew to form on the trees and also on the ground under the trees. The insect soon defoliates the trees, he added. Homeowners do not take proper care of pear trees, he explained, and allowing such an infestation in backyard pear trees endangers nearby commercial orchards.

Scannell had stated such a provision would be discriminatory since it pertains only to pear trees and not to other fruit trees.

The Jackson county court, after reading Scannell's opinion, turned down the previous request from the Jackson county planning commission which requested an amendment to the subdivision ordinance regarding pear trees. "Requiring removal of pear trees from any property under plat for subdivision is not proper," the attorney had written. "It is more properly part of zoning and land use regulations rather than of a subdivision ordinance."

"This is similar to requiring a tree planting program and plans of dedication and certain set back lines. This is held to be an exercise of eminent domain rather than of police powers of the state," Scannell wrote.

Governor Pleads Lack of Intelligence
Charlotte, N. C. - (UPI) - Gov. Terry Sanford had a simple answer Friday for critics who suggested that he proposed a state sales tax as a gimmick to trick legislators into searching for other sources of revenue.

"I'm not smart enough to be that devious," Sanford said.

Each of the leaders gave comments on different projects during the March 10 meeting of the Antelope 4-H Livestock club held in the Antelope school house.

Diane Barton reported on the window display for 4-H week put in the Albers Feed and Seed Supply store in Medford. Ron Anderson reported on a skit for the 4-H club follies.

For the program each member of the swine club gave a report on a different type of pig.

The club will hold its annual box social at its April 12 meeting in the Eagle Point Grange hall. The public is cordially invited.

Daffy Dills
The Daffy Dills went on a field trip recently to the forestry headquarters. Wes Stanfield took us to see all of the equipment. We saw some maps, radios, the cook's house and the crew's house. After we saw some of the trucks, we were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Curt Nesheim. Mr. Nesheim is district warden of southern Oregon.

When we came back to Mrs. Anhorn's, we saw a film called "Tomorrow's Trees." C. C. Hoover of the Eagle Point Grange gave us some little trees to plant, called Arizona cypress.

Then the last of the group went downtown to look at 4-H windows. The Daffy Dills had one at the Central Point library. Refreshments were served by Carolyn Sidener, Cathy Anhorn, Reporter.

Grange Notes

Lake Creek Grange
Lake Creek Grange members had two speakers during the lecturer's program recently. Steve Geren, Eagle Point FFA club member, talked on the future of farming. He was introduced by Nat Etzel, leader of FFA at Eagle Point high school.

The second speaker was Sgt. Thomas Eaton, Oregon state police. He said every driver should evaluate his driving habits for the past year, and then resolve to be a better driver for the coming year.

A new member, Victor Halsey, was welcomed and Phil Dunkel was voted to become a member.

Bob Gilkey reported on several measures pending in the state legislature.

Camille Gilkey was elected Pomona, one of the graces, replacing the late Faye Bunell.

The next Grange meeting will be April 14 at 8:30 p.m.

Disabled Worker Will Get Social Security

A disabled worker drawing federal social security benefits who returns to work despite severe handicaps will now continue to receive his monthly payments for as long as 12 months, according to Edward B. Jacobson, district manager of the Medford social security office.

He explained that one of the new provisions of the social security act corrected an inequity in the law. Prior to October, 1960, only those disabled persons who were undergoing rehabilitation under a state approved program were paid benefits during a 12-month trial period of employment.

Now those who rehabilitate themselves or are under any other rehabilitation plan may get payments up to one year during a trial work period, Jacobson said.

Notified Social Security
In many instances prior to the change in the law, disabled beneficiaries notified the social security office that they had returned to work and their checks were automatically stopped. Then it was discovered by the beneficiary himself that he could not continue to work and was forced to quit. In the meantime, checks were not being received and many cases of hardship were noted. It is to prevent these occurrences that the law has been changed, Jacobson noted.

Disability benefits are paid to disabled workers and their families only when the worker is so severely disabled that he is unable to engage in substantial gainful activity. Once he has recovered sufficiently to enable him to work, benefits cease. Where there is reasonable doubt that the individual has been sufficiently rehabilitated to permit him to work, payments will be continued up to one year even though he is working on a trial basis.

This provision in the law is designed to encourage disabled individuals to seek rehabilitation and eventually return to gainful activity.

Jacobson also said that notwithstanding the trial work period provision, those getting disability monthly payments must report to the Social Security administration immediately when they return to work.
