College Professor Has Review in Oregon Quarterly

Ashland - Students of Indian lore will be interested in a good review appearing in the current issue of the Oregon Historical Quarterly by F. D. Haines Jr., associate professor of social science at Southern Oregon college.

Dr. Haines' review of the book, "Chief Spokane Garry 1811-1892: Christian, Statesman, Friend of the White Man," by Thomas E. Jessett, pays tribute to the author's attention to historical detail. The tragedy of the splitting of tribal ties resulting from the conflicting claims of the rival Roman Catholics and Presbyterians is presented with great clarity, the reviewer says.

Much of the narrative, according to Haines, revolves around the person of Chief Spokane Garry of the Spokane Indian tribe. Chief Garry was given a white man's education in Canada and then returned to his tribe to teach farming and the tenets of Catholicism. Letters written by him show him to have been the possessor of great eloquence and intelligence. That he failed as a true leader for his people was because he was not essentially a man of action.

Colleges Foundation Representatives in Medford This Week

Two representatives of the Oregon Colleges Foundation, an organization of the 11 accredited, independent colleges and universities of the state, were in Medford this week, discussing the objectives of the Foundation with a number of individuals here.

The Foundation was established to accept donations for operating expenses for the 11 colleges. Foundation funds are distributed on a formula which calls for 50 per cent of the funds to be allocated to the 11 schools equally, and 50 per cent to be divided on an enrollment basis.

The representatives visiting here were Dr. Milo Ross, president of George Fox college, and Grant Cosgrove, Portland, executive director of the foundation.

The organization is seeking, in particular, donations from business and industrial firms which have come to the conclusion that they have a vital stake in higher education, both as a matter of good citizenship, and as a source of trained and educated personnel.

Goal Continuing Fund - The goal is a continuing fund to provide $50 per student per year, the foundation executives reported. Last year contributions totaled $25 per student, and totalled $191,750 between July 1, 1959, and June 30, 1960.

Dr. Ross pointed out that 27 per cent of Oregon's students enrolled in institutions of higher education are in the 11 independent colleges. Each of these students, he said, represents a tax savings of $1,000 per year to Oregon taxpayers, since they are not tax-supported institutions. If the 11 independent colleges were to vanish, he pointed out, it would require a capital investment of $50 million to replace their facilities, in addition to an average capital investment of $8 million annually.

Dr. Ross said that the voluntary support principle, as applied to Oregon's independent colleges, is one with a long tradition in American democracy and higher education. And, he said, Oregon has been well-served this way in the past.

One example of outstanding industrial participation is the Portland electronics firm, Tectronix, which is matching, dollar for dollar, other gifts made to the foundation throughout the state.

In Similar Organizations - The foundation is a participant in a similar natural organization, comprised of 40 state independent college foundations. The national group accepts gifts from major national industrial firms, and then allocates the funds to state organizations where branches of the firm are located.
