Stagecoach Built By Medford Man To Be in Parade

Rogue valley residents and visitors will have the opportunity to see a bright red and gold Concord stagecoach in the Pear Blossom Festival parade Saturday. George McOne, Medford, recently completed building the replica of a Concord coach in his shop at 1158 Court st. In order to have the coach as authentic as possible, he sent to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C., for plans. He also made a trip to the Siskiyou county museum in Yreka to study the stagecoach on display there. Three months in the making, it is exactly like the Concord coach in the Wells Fargo museum room in San Francisco. The Jacksonville city council has given McOne the franchise to operate the coach in Jacksonville this summer giving tours of that historic area. His regular schedule will start about June 1, and last through the Labor Day week end. In 1960, McOne built his own covered wagon and went on a tour of Washington, Idaho, and parts of Canada. In the summer of 1959, he was a member of the On To Oregon Cavalcade, the group which made the wagon train trek from Independence, Mo., to Independence, Ore., along the Old Oregon Trail. The organization is now planning to build an Oregon Trail Museum in Independence, Ore. McOne is president of the group. The two white mules pulling his stagecoach in the parade Saturday are the same ones he drove from Missouri.
