'Team Teaching' Others To Become Household Words

Salem—UPI—Ever hear of "team teaching," "ungraded class," "variable grouping," and "flexible scheduling?"

These terms still baffle the casual observer, and even many teachers, but Dr. Leon P. Minear says they will be household words in Oregon education soon.

The new state superintendent of public instruction says the techniques have been used elsewhere with success and Oregon has the benefit of other states' experience. They are part of his crash program for Oregon education improvement announced last month.

"Team teaching," is so new that even teachers are asking what it's about.

Dr. Minear explains it as when more than one teacher is responsible for the same group of children at a given time. An example is when a regular teacher is assisted by a student teacher. But a team might consist of four or more teachers. One might specialize in science and math; another in languages; a third in social studies; and a fourth, in music.

They teach in the same classroom and work with the same group of students, sometimes 100 or more. Team teaching was first developed in the late 1950s. About 100 school systems in the nation now use some form.

"Ungraded classes" wipes out all or part of the present system of grading children, allowing each child to progress as rapidly as his abilities. This in turn leads to "variable grouping," putting kids smarter in one subject in one class segment and the duller ones in another. "Flexible scheduling" is usually found in high school team teaching. This means classes that vary in time spent each day and frequency of classes during the week. The accent could be placed where school officials think it is needed.

Although team teaching is working out well elsewhere—and Dr. Minear wants it here—he feels it should not be launched in a district without one or two years of study and preparation.

This fits into his program because it is an eight-year plan.

Jaycee Flag Drive Under Way in City

The Medford Junior Chamber of Commerce annual flag drive is under way this month to encourage downtown merchants to join the Jaycee flag program.

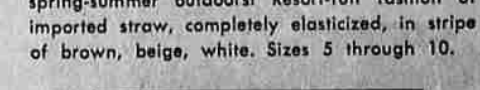

Letters have been mailed to over 150 Medford businesses explaining the program, in which members of the Jaycees post flags in front of the stores on days when flags should be displayed, and removed them in the evenings.

The letter includes correspondence from John Pletsch, manager of the Jackson County Federal Savings and Loan association, praising the flag program and encouraging all merchants to join.

Information on the project is available by calling Mike Smith at SPRing 3-4954, or by writing the Medford Junior Chamber of Commerce, box 251, Medford.
