German Guides Learn Ways to Offset Prejudice

Bonn — (UP) — Germany's future tourists will learn that Britons are shy, Italians industrious and the French prim.

These are three of the rules to be taught at the High School for Tour Guides being set up in Bad Godesberg, the diplomatic suburb of Bonn.

The guides will be taught how to destroy favorite prejudices existing in Germany and how to turn German tourists into roving ambassadors.

The school is being established by the European Action Society, a German organization founded seven years ago to promote European understanding.

Germans, the society has discovered, are full of prejudices against and false impressions of their neighbors. It has compiled a booklet of "Standard Mistakes" made by German tourists.

Snobs in Tweeds

England, the guides will learn, is not a country full of anachronistic snobs clad in homespun tweeds.

"The secret of the British," the society text book says, "is latent shyness."

Whoever dislikes the conservative aspects of England, it warns, had better keep it to himself.

In Germany it may be correct to shake hands with everyone in the office morning and evening, but avoid it in England, the guides will be told.

And avoid discussing politics and a third party with an Englishman, the booklet adds.

Italians, the society says delicately, are not lazy — they are really industrious although enjoying "a special talent for making the most out of life."

Italian women have high moral standards — "if necessary, the entire family is prepared to go to extremes to ward off interlopers," the booklet warns would-be German casanovas.

In France, it says, "the clock goes differently, but not worse." Whoever criticizes dirty windows in France fails to grasp "a natural atmosphere."

Lovers in France may kiss in the "thickest traffic," but this demands the charm with which only the French are born, the booklet says.

"Tourist copies," it adds, "are in poor taste."

Bank Schedules Planning Forum

The U.S. National bank will hold the third in its spring series of statewide estate planning forums in the Jackson hotel Pioneer room Wednesday, April 19.

The Medford forum is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. with Allan F. Perry, Medford branch manager, presiding.

Ashland and Grants Pass branches will be represented at the meeting, and R. H. Lung, trust officer in charge of the bank's Klamath Falls trust division, will make introductions.

Other speakers will be officers and representatives of the bank's trust department in Portland. Wills, probate requirements, trust arrangements and estate tax costs are program topics.

Anyone interested is invited. A question and answer period and social hour with refreshments will conclude the forum.

Fresno Students Are Building New Houses

Fresno, Calif. — (UP) — Fresno City college students have built seven houses during the past nine years. The homes are part of a special project to give students practical experience in house planning, designing and building.

The newest structure has three bedrooms and one-and-a-half-baths and was offered for sale to the highest bidder, minimum price $3,500. Only the exterior of the house was finished.

Cop Cites Son for Car-House Accident

Martinez, Calif. — (UP) — A car smashed into a Martinez home recently and injured a little girl who was watching television.

Police Sgt. Arlis Marler investigated the accident and turned in his report. The report stated that the girl, Carol Ann Brunt, 7, suffered chest and stomach injuries. It also stated that the car was his own and the driver, his son, Leon, 19, Leon was cited for driving without due caution.
