Man Admits Story Was Fabricated—A 39-year-old Medford man, who Tuesday told police he had been kidnapped and assaulted, admitted yesterday that he made up the entire story.

Buel Vesley Kincheloe, 918 Maple Park dr., said he fabricated the kidnapping tale as a cover-up for spending money that belonged to his landlady. Tuesday, Kincheloe told police that four men forced him into their car at knifepoint and made him buy them some wine. Kincheloe indicated to police that he had spent most of the missing money on liquor. Police released the man with a stern reprimand and a warning that he not make any false crime reports in the future.

Quotes From the News

BY UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL
 Moscow—Yuri Gagarin, the world's first spaceman, on man's next step in space:
 "I think the time is not far off when we shall be able to carry out a flight to the moon, Mars and other areas of the vast outer space. This will take place probably sooner than we think."
 Greensboro, N.C.—Charlie Sifford, Negro golfer who must drop out of the tournament circuit when the other professionals play in the South:
 "When I have to leave them in the South, they think it's a damn shame."
 Washington—Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, after a tour of the recreation-stricken coal mines in West Virginia:
 "I admire even more the resourcefulness of the coal industry. I like the guts of the coal industry."
 Beaumont, Tex.—Student Tom Davis on the space-age ambition of a group of Lamar Tech College freshman who already have squeezed 25 persons in a Volkswagen for an alleged collegiate record:
 "We are going to float a bed to Galveston on the surf."

Land Use Patterns In Oregon Cities Outlined by Bureau

Eugene—Information on the land use pattern in 33 Oregon cities is outlined in a recent publication of the University of Oregon bureau of municipal research and service. The study indicates that an average of 35.4 per cent of the developed land in the 33 cities is devoted to residential use; 4.1 per cent is in commercial use; 11.4 per cent in industrial use; 18.8 per cent to public and semi-public use; and 30.3 per cent to street right-of-way. The study indicates considerable variation in the land use of different cities. Areas in use for industrial purposes, at the time the bureau conducted the survey, ranged from 0.7 per cent to 35.4 per cent of residential land per different cities. Commercial land uses ranged from 0.2 per cent to 12.4 per cent. The survey also showed an average of 4 acres of developed land for every 100 persons in the 33 cities. This included an average of 4.9 acres of residential land per 100 person, 4.2 acres of street right-of-way, 2.6 acres of public and semi-public land, 1.6 acres of industrial land, and 0.57 acres of commercial land.

Detailed Information
 The study, which includes detailed information on the 33 cities, covered city sizes from Columbia City to Eugene. The information for 31 of the cities was gathered by the bureau in connection with studies carried out during the three and a half year federal program of urban planning assistance. Private planning consultants provided the information on two cities. The information has been compiled and analyzed to provide background information for city planning commissions and city councils in establishing and modifying zoning restrictions. However, the report points out that the compilation should not be regarded as "providing a standard that can safely be followed in making decisions with reference to zoning. The tabulations reveal wide differences in land use in different cities. These differences reflect such factors as the economic base of the city, the period and rate of growth, location in relation to other urban centers, and the extent and nature of fringe development." The study shows a close relationship between population and the amount of land devoted

Stamp Collector Items To Be Sent From OSC's Ship

Corvallis—Stamp collector items—first-day covers—will be issued with the commissioning and maiden voyage of Oregon State college's new $300,000 oceanographic research vessel this May. Three cachets, attractive designs on the envelope in honor of the occasion and the three cities closely associated with the ship, will be mailed when the "Accona" makes its first voyage from Portland to Newport on Yaquina Bay. Portland, the commissioning port; Newport, the home port; and Corvallis, the home of OSC's department of oceanography, will each be recognized on a separate cachet. In addition, the post office department has approved a slogan cancellation for the Corvallis cachets. The slogan will probably read: "Maiden Voyage, OSC's 'Accona,' Oceanography Research Vessel." The first-day cover envelopes will also be stamped with the ship's seal. A four-page printed leaflet will be inserted in each cachet. It will have information on the research ship and the three cities. First-day covers will cost 20 cents each, or 50 cents for the set of three. The Corvallis Chapter No. 16 of the Cover Collectors Circuit club is sponsoring the first-day mail run. Orders should be sent to "Accona," Corvallis, preferably before April 20. The research vessel was financed by the Office of Naval Research for use by OSC's department of oceanography, headed by Dr. Wayne V. Burt. It is the first such vessel built under a newly-expanded government-sponsored 10-year program of research in waters surrounding the United States.

Prisoners End Walla Walla Strike

Walla Walla—(UPI)—The sit-down strike ended at the state penitentiary today and inmates returned to work at the start of the prison working day. The entire 1,100-man population of the maximum security section had been locked in cells since Monday morning when between 800 and 700 of them refused to go to work. The men received only water and sandwiches during the strike. Warden Bob Rhyas said three inmates were being held in isolation for investigation. He did not identify them. Rhyas said the revolt was touched off when inmates "told half-truths" about the prison medical program.

Minimum Wage Bill Stated for Senate Debate

Washington—(UPI)—The Senate planned to open debate today on President Kennedy's $1.25-an-hour minimum wage bill. Kennedy's Senate chiefs faced a battle against conservatives who want to trim the increase in the present $1-an-hour federal wage floor and limit the number of new workers brought under the law's coverage. Sen. Pat McNamara (D-Mich.), sponsor of the Kennedy-backed minimum wage bill, predicted it would pass Congress. The measure would provide gradual hikes to $1.25 for 23.9 million workers already covered and extend protection to 4.1 million additional mostly in retail and service establishments. But conservatives, whose House brethren succeeded in passing a sharply curtailed version of the President's request, have warned they would try to cut down the Senate measure. Other congressional news: Housing: The AFL-CIO called for large boosts in the long-range housing program recommended by Kennedy. The labor organization forecast tragic consequences if the nation failed to build many more homes than ever before. It said urban renewal grants should be increased from Kennedy's proposed $2.5 billion in four years to $6.25 billion in four years. Prices: Chairman Estes Kefauver of the Senate antitrust subcommittee opened hearings into the nation's largest price-fixing conspiracy. The Tennessee Democrat said witnesses from eight electrical equipment firms would be asked whether higher-ups condoned price rigging. Delinquency: The Senate Wednesday passed and sent to the House a bill authorizing a four-year, $20 million battle against juvenile delinquency. The measure would authorize $2.5 million a year to develop crime control techniques and another $2.5 million annually to help states and communities train personnel to work with juvenile lawbreakers.
