Aluminum Awnings Becoming Popular With Home Owners

Awnings of all kinds are back into popularity these days thanks to newly discovered benefits.

Aluminum, now the core of most metal awnings, is a lightweight metal which, in some alloys and shapes is stronger than steel. Being metal, it is long-lasting, tough, resistant to hard use, shape-retaining and care free indefinitely. Being aluminum, rust is totally unknown for many years of service.

As a bright reflective surface, aluminum bounces heat rays away in summer deters total escape of heat from windows and doors in winter because heat rays from within bounce back off the underside during the heating season.

In summer, the sun's rays ricochet off and away so interiors stay cooler.

Heat Reduced

Insulation contractors, builders and even the air conditioning industry are aware of better functioning equipment when the home is equipped with aluminum awnings. As much as 20 degrees of heat reduction is obtained when windows and doors are shielded from the sun's tenacious heat in summer.

Metal awnings spark up the look of the home, too. Bright car-finish quality painting coats the natural aluminum with glistening white or any of a rainbow of colors. The most popular is white ground with one or two set-off colors to harmonize with some other color on the house.

House awnings and doors come in a variety of styles ranging from simple stationary units to roll-ups. Sizes and styles fitted to the particular window or door and the owner's preferences.

In buying these products, buyers should insist upon NMAA - approved products based on quality standards and deal only with established dealers.

Variety of Cooking Assignments Seen

You may not hold many formal dinners or holiday feasts this summer. Yet, the homemaker is likely to find herself involved in a great variety of cooking assignments.

Indoors or out, the smart homemaker will look for comfort in summer. Indoors, a kitchen exhaust fan can do wonders for keeping the house cooler and free from cooking odors.

For an exciting change of pace, cook the whole meal on the patio using versatile electric servants such as frypans, saucepans, waffle and sandwich grills, table ovens, toasters and coffee makers.
