

'K' Insists Rockefeller Force Behind Kennedy

I interjected the remark that the final decisions would be made by the President. But Khrushchev insisted that the forces behind the President would determine his policy. These forces behind the Kennedy administration he summed up in the one word "Rockefeller." The view that he is running the Kennedy administration will be news to Governor Rockefeller. I should add that Khrushchev considers me a Republican, which will be news to Richard Nixon.

Then we got onto the subject of nuclear testing. He said that the Western powers were not ready to conclude an agreement, and that this was shown, among other things, by the demand for 21 or perhaps 19 inspections a year. He had been led personally to believe that the West would be satisfied with about three "symbolic" inspections. Nineteen inspections, our present demand, were nothing but a demand for the right to conduct complete reconnaissance of the Soviet Union.

Wasn't Test Underground

I asked him about his attitude towards underground testing. He replied that the USSR has never done any underground testing and never will. I asked why? Because, he said, we do not see any value in small tactical atomic weapons. If it comes to war, we shall use only the biggest weapons. The smaller ones are very expensive and they can decide nothing. The fact that they are expensive doesn't bother you because you don't care what you spend and, what is more, many of your generals are connected with big business. But in the USSR we have to economize, and tactical weapons are a waste.

I report this without having the technical expertise to comment on it.

Then he went on to say that the second reason why he had no great hopes of an agreement was that the French are now testing and are unlikely to sign the agreement. It is obvious, he said, that if the French are not in the agreement, they will do the testing for the Americans. To which, I said, and the Chinese will do the testing for you. He paused and then said that this was a fair remark. But, he added, while China is moving in the direction where she will be able to make tests, she is not yet able to make them. When the time comes that she can, there will be a new problem. We would like all states to sign a nuclear agreement.

Finally, he came to his third reason why an agreement may not be possible. It turns on the problem of the administrator of the agreement. Here, he was vehement and unqualified. He would never accept a single neutral administrator. Why? Because, he said, while there are neutral countries, there are no neutral men. You would not accept a Communist administrator and I cannot accept a non-Communist administrator. I will never entrust the security of the Soviet Union to any foreigner. We cannot have another Hammarckjold. The Soviet government has now come to the conclusion that there can be no such thing as an impartial civil servant in this deeply divided world, and that the kind of political celibacy which the British theory of the civil service calls for is in international affairs a fiction. This new dogma has long consequences. It means that there can be international cooperation only if, in the administration as well as in the policy-making, the Soviet Union has a veto.

Our talk went on to Cuba, Iran, revolutionary movements in general, and finally to Germany. I shall report on these topics in subsequent articles.
