Minor Children May Be Eligible for Payments

Unmarried minor children of deceased veterans may be eligible to pension payments even when their mother, the veteran's widow, is not eligible. S. T. Brannock, contact representative, Veterans Administration Domiciliary, White City, pointed out today.

Cases in point are where the widow is ineligible due to having remarried or due to having income in excess of limits prescribed by law. The ineligibility of the widow does not effect the eligibility of the minor children, Brannock said.

When the widow and children are already on the pension rolls, the subsequent ineligibility of the widow poses no problem for minor children. Pension payments to the children are continued after the mother's name is removed from the rolls.

Should Make Inquiry Brannock emphasized that in all cases where the widow has never applied for pension, or whose application was not allowed, due to her marriage or excessive income, the VA may have no record of any minor children to which payments should be made. In such cases the mother, or custodian of the children, should make inquiry as to the children's rights to pension.

Likewise, where the mother and widow applied for pension prior to June, 1960, and was denied because the veteran did not have a service connected disability of 10 percent or more at the time of his death, inquiry should be made concerning entitlement under a new law, Public Law 86-211, which became effective July 1, 1960, Brannock said.

Unmarried minor children of deceased veterans may be eligible for pension until they are 18 years of age, or if upon reaching 18 they are attending school, pension may continue until their 21st birthday, Brannock said.

PROPOSED COUNTY BUILDING CODE Former Los Angeles Official Says Code Is Too Restrictive

He asked for minimum standards, such as wiring, water, sewage, location of buildings and reasonable structural requirements. But he said restrictions in the proposed code are "going too far" in a county too sparsely settled and are not necessary to such an extent to meet the stated purposes of the proposed code. Lovejoy said Velliquette's suggestions would be considered by the commission. Limited Support At least limited support of a code was expressed by a Medford man who identified himself as a carpenter who worked on many buildings outside the city limits. He said he had seen homes in the county which are dangerous because of bad construction, and declared that the people in this area need "some protection."

Questions were asked the commission concerning the rights of the people to vote on such a code, and in criticism of the power of the county court to adopt a county building code. Lovejoy explained that the planning commission had called the public hearing to hear views of residents, and would later make a recommendation to the court as to whether or not a code should be adopted. He declared that "no undue hardships will be placed on any person."

The chairman said the commission believed that last night's audience was not necessarily a "cross section of the county," because those who were opposed to a measure often were the only ones who expressed their opinions. A Jacksonville woman asked if Lovejoy would think "an audience of 200 for the measure would be a cross section."

Melvin (Bud) Hoover, White City, said he would vote for a building code he said "White City suggested a year ago." It would ease restrictions for persons building for themselves, he said, and would also solve the sewage disposal problem for the county with new septic tank types.

The hearing closed shortly after a "middle of the road" statement by Harold Applebaum, East Point, of Cal-Ore Tachies, Faydrex Inc., land developers.

He asked those opposed to the code "not to belittle the commission," and declared that although the code is premature there will be a need in the future for planning and certain restrictions, "because we want a well planned community."

His remarks were received with little enthusiasm from the audience.

Portland - (UPI) - An estate of $1,696,418 was left by Mrs. Myrtle Maling, widow of an Oregon canning company owner, an inventory on file in Probate Court showed today.

Mrs. Maling, who died last month at the age of 82, was the widow of Bertrand Maling, operator of Ray-Maling canneries in Hillsboro and Woodburn.

Principal heirs are to grandsons, Thomas and William McDonald of Portland. The estate consists of land holdings in Multnomah and Lincoln counties, common stocks, bonds and savings. Bulk of the estate is in shares of General Foods Corp., valued at $1,210,000.

In Washington, the Kennedy administration was reportedly ready to call for a military alert by SEATO if the Soviet Union continues to delay a cease fire in Laos.

An administration official said the next few days would be critical. Britain has called on the Russians to agree to a cease fire by today, but there was doubt the Soviets would meet this deadline.

Decision Hailed Military observers here hailed America's decision to send the advisors to help train Laotian troops in their fight against the Communist-supported rebels.

But the immediate effect of the U.S. move was likely to stretch the already-thin diplomatic ties that bind some reluctant SEATO members in support of the royal Laotian government.
