Correspondence School's Idea May Ease Jobless Problem

By HENRY J. BECHTOLD
UPI Financial Editor

New York – (UPI) – The unemployment problem is going to be with us for a while, but International Correspondence Schools believes it has one way of easing the situation a bit.

Bechtold

It said accelerated home-study training offers a quick and effective system to prepare idle workers for shifts into new occupations.

ICS President John C. Villaume declared that the effectiveness of the administration's depressed areas bill will be greatly enhanced by utilizing home study programs to facilitate that section of the law which seeks to curb structural employment by appropriating $14.5 million to retrain unemployed workers.

Such retraining, he added, will help workers find new jobs in less critical fields once their inherent talents have been reinforced by correspondence course study from accredited sources.

Need Aptitude Tests

He explained that the first step in organizing home-study programs is for competent business, labor and civil authorities to scan the aptitudes and educational backgrounds of workers either laid off or about to be discharged to determine other occupations for which they might qualify.

After it is determined what direction the retraining should take, Villaume said arrangements can be made to procure correspondence courses which can be studied either at home or in classes organized by cooperating industrial firms.

And while this retraining is in progress, the firms involved should be exploring employment needs in other industries so that workers with jobs will know where new opportunities exist, according to the Scranton, Pa., firm's plan.

Large Market Change

Looking beyond the present unemployment crisis, the ICS executive observed that reconciling job opportunities with the available work force will be further complicated in this decade by drastic changes in the complexion of the labor market and in its educational background.

While the nation's population should rise 17 per cent to 210 million by 1970, Villaume noted that the number of 20-24 year-olds will grow 56 per cent.

Among the youngest workers to enter the job market, 7.5 million will not have completed high school and 2.5 million will not have finished grade school.

On the other hand, he pointed out that a third of the nation's brightest students will not go to college. Yet the biggest increase in job openings in the 1960's will come in industries requiring the most education and training.

A total of 261 courses are offered by ICS.

Ever Hear Tree Frogs Singing in The Rain?

Because he usually lives in a tree, some folks call him the squirrel tree frog. He has suction cups on his toes, dew-absorbers on his stomach, green coloring in his skin pigment, a light in his eyes, a song in his heart.

For a little guy with just three toes to a foot, he can accomplish some remarkable stunts in tree climbing, or even walking calmly on a sheer perpendicular surface. It's all done with suction cups. These highy developed cups, with which the tree frog is equipped, adhere readily to any surface, rough, smooth, irregular, or a combination of all three.

Not Many Slips

Like his relatives, he gets to the places where he wants to go by jumping, but unlike his relatives that live in ponds, he lives in trees, and does it dangerously. Without a thought of danger he will jump from one limb to another.

Hiding on a leaf or in a crevice, he feeds on insects, worms or anything that crawls, and is small enough to fit into his mouth. He changes his color to match his surroundings. Usually he is a delicate shade of leaf-green, with a white or yellow stripe along both sides of his slender, graceful body.

His skin is very soft, with the shine of fine pottery. On his little underside is a series of fine pores that have a blotter-like action, absorbing water from any wet surface. He can take in his necessary moisture at the same time he is bug hunting. He has a front-hinged tongue which he unconsciously always keeps covered with a sticky substance to which the hapless bug adheres.

Few people ever see these lilliputian frogs, in spite of the fact that they are rather plentiful. More people are familiar with his voice, for it is the squirrel tree frog that usually becomes enthusiastically vocal just before a summer shower. The male alone has the voice. The little female just sits nearby and enjoys his serenade.

Signal to Sing

One hot summer afternoon, we watched as storm clouds piled up overhead. The first big drops fell at the same instant that a wild tree-frog chorus filled the air. They had all been waiting for the signal and they responded joyously. Even the downpour failed to drown out the clamor. For several minutes the rain came down, then, as if some mighty hand had turned the handle, it stopped.

At the same second the frog chorus stopped, as if their calls and the rain were all attached to the same lever. Later, the rain began again and with it the tree-frog serenade, almost keeping time to the rhythm of the falling water. There they all were, hilariously, "singing in the rain."

Committee Okays Police Pay Raise

Salem – (UPI) – The Ways and Means Committee Thursday night approved pay increases for the state police, ranging from $65 a month to $125 a month more.

The measure, which went to the House floor, would bring recruits to $4,680 per year; privates to $5,640; privates first class $6,480; corporals $6,780; sergeants $7,200; lieutenants $8,100; and captains $9,000.

If the legislature approves a new Department of Social Services, the department director would have a salary rate of $16,000 to $19,500.

WANTS PROOF

Washington – (UPI) – U. S. roving ambassador W. Averell Harriman said Thursday night American scientists should demand proof that Russia put a man into orbit. Speaking at a dinner at the National Press club, Harriman said that he thought "we would make a great mistake" to accept the Soviet claims without actual scientific data to support them.

LESSON IN POLITICS

Dunn, N.C. – (UPI) – James T. Yearby had it in the bag. Exactly 893 persons, he said, told him they had voted for him before the polls closed in Tuesday's city council election. The official count gave Yearby 252 votes. He came in third in a four-way race.
