Migraine in Children

A woman writes me a most interesting story about her girl who, evidently, always has had attacks of what is called cyclic vomiting. I will never forget the first child - a girl of 10 - whom I saw with this strange disease. The clinical picture was so vivid that although I saw the child some 50 years ago, I can still see the room and the bed; the anxious parents, and the child, so utterly miserable that she lay as if half-conscious. During that whole day she had said not a word in answer to her mother's questions. Once every hour or so she would groan with abdominal pain and then she would retch violently for a few minutes, bringing up a little bile. Then, again, she would lapse into her sleepy state, and lie as if almost dead.

At first, when I saw this girl with a disease which I had never seen before, I feared she might have some serious trouble in her abdomen - something which should quickly be operated on. But, fortunately, the mother then told of other exactly similar spells which the girl had had. They had lasted a day or two and then, rather suddenly, had cleared away. Then I knew that the attack I was seeing probably would quiet down, too, and it did. I also learned that the mother and the father had each had a severe form of migraine. Also, I learned that the girl had gotten her attacks after some excitement, such as an examination, or a school picnic. Years later, I saw another one of these girls, and because, by then, I was sure of the clinical picture, I begged the family doctor not to operate. He went ahead and explored the girl's abdomen and found nothing. The more I have seen of this disease the surer I have become that it is a form of migraine. I have seen it clear up entirely, just as the tendency to sick headaches often does, when the girl reaches the age of twenty or so.

Commonly, in these cases,
