World Missions To Children To Build Headquarters Near Murphy

By MAUDE ZIEGLER

Mail Tribune Correspondent
Murphy—A site near Murphy has been selected as the center of World Missions to Children which is moving its general headquarters to Oregon after 15 years of establishment at San Jose, Calif. The Rev. Ellsworth Steele, founder and director of the organization, spoke to a group of 80 persons at the Red Wood country church at Grants Pass Friday concerning the establishment of the mission center in southern Oregon. The group has missionaries working from centers in five foreign countries.

A staff of workmen is starting the building program this week on the 80-acre site located five miles south of Grants Pass in the New Hope district. The land was obtained six months ago from Harold Bennett and Frank Morgan, and was cleared during the winter.

10-Year Program

A long range program covering a 10-year period in developing the mission was explained at Friday's meeting by Mr. Steele. The center will include an accredited school, both elementary and high school, where children may board, a center for senior citizens, a Christian conference center, institutional care for homeless children and a location for children's camps.

The acreage, which will be increased with expansion of the program, will give space for garden produce, dairy herds, poultry and orchards to make the mission as self supporting as possible, Mr. Steele explained.

It is expected that sufficient rooms can be built to open elementary school and Junior high classes in September. A five room frame school building and one dormitory will constitute the initial buildings planned for September. An enrollment of 100 children is anticipated, and Mr. Steele said June 15 has been set as the deadline for approximate registrations. A local office staff will be established by May 15. Registration blanks and rules and regulations will be available soon.

The cafeteria will not be available this year, but hot lunches will be served at the dormitory kitchen. Bus routes will not be established this year either, it was said. A full program of sports is planned. The school is interdenominational, and non-Christian children also may enroll. State school texts will be used, and children will buy their own books. The school is supported by public free will offerings and contributions.

Rural Setting

Mr. Steele named the opportunity for a rural setting in an area not over populated as one of the reasons for selecting southern Oregon as the location for the headquarters. Low cost of land and wide spread interest in the work of the mission were other reasons given. Last summer Mr. Steele remained at a private home in the Upper Applegate while recuperating from an illness. He made a study of the selected area at that time.

World Missions to Children had its beginning in German prison camps during World War II. Mr. Steele was a prisoner and observed the desperate plight of thousands of children. The mission was organized in 1946, and in 1950 the first missionaries were sent out to begin the present program among children and young people of other countries.

The Irish Bible Institute and Children's home was established in Ireland. Similar centers have been set up in Japan, Brazil, India and Austria, where children are cared for and given a Christian education. The southern Oregon center will train missionaries for foreign fields, and the room for expansion here is limitless, Mr. Steele indicated. Establishment of a Bible college here is one of the long range goals.
