Commissioning of OSC's Research Ship Set May 3

Corvallis — Commissioning of Oregon State college's $300,000 ocean research vessel, "Acona," will be May 3 with research cruises scheduled to get underway before the month is out.

Commissioning ceremonies are scheduled at 4 p.m. at the U.S. Naval and Marine Corps Reserve Training center on Swan Island, Portland. Open house and a display of scientific equipment are planned following the ceremony at which a leading Naval official, Gov. Mark Hatfield, and OSC and state board of higher education leaders will speak. The public is invited.

Following commissioning in Portland, the vessel will go to its home port, Newport. After a shakedown cruise to check out scientific gear and vessel operation, the Acona will start a continuous series of fact-finding cruises designed to give the first detailed information on the ocean off Oregon.

Representing the Navy will be Capt. Harold E. Ruble, deputy and assistant chief of Naval research in the Office of Naval Research, Washington, D.C.

The Acona was built with a quarter-million-dollar grant from the Office of Naval Research, which picked OSC two years ago as one of 10 schools in the nation to carry out a 10-year program of research in waters surrounding the U.S. Acona is an Indian word for Yaquina. Newport is on Yaquina Bay.

Special research equipment on the Acona will permit the OSC scientists to survey the ocean from top to bottom. Research projects planned include inventories of plant and animal life; bottom sediments and the ocean floor; currents and how they change off Oregon; temperature, oxygen content and salinity of the water; pollution problems in coastal estuaries; and defense-type research on underwater factors affecting submarine operations.

Oregon has the fourth longest coastline of any state, but almost no ocean research had been done before the OSC studies were started in 1954. Dr. Wayne V. Burt is head of the OSC oceanography department.

Courts Asked To Force Virginia Schools To Open

Washington — (UPI) — The federal government, in an unprecedented move, asked the courts Wednesday to force a Virginia county to reopen its public schools on a racially integrated basis.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy said the government has moved to become a party in a suit brought by Negro students in Prince Edward county. Public schools there have been closed since 1959.

Original Suit in 1952

He said the Justice Department filed its motion before U.S. District Judge Owen R. Lewis at Richmond, Va., to intervene as a plaintiff in the long-pending school desegregation case.

The suit originally was brought in 1952 and was one of the four involved in the Supreme Court's historic 1954 school desegregation decision. Since June, 1958, there have been no public school facilities for the estimated 1,700 Negro children in Prince Edward county. The 1,400 white children in the county attend private schools financed by state, county and private contributions made in lieu of tax payments.

The government asked the court at Richmond to enjoin county and state officials "from failing or refusing to maintain in Prince Edward county a system of public free schools."

It also sought injunctions against the use of public funds to support private schools or the maintenance of public schools elsewhere in Virginia until Prince Edward county reopens its public schools on a desegregated basis.

Diamond Phonograph Needles Are Popular

New York — (UPI) — More diamonds are now going into phonograph needles than into rings, according to Karl Jensen, president of Jensen Industries.

Because of the switch to stereo, the hi-fi equipment maker said he believes that "within three years nothing but diamonds will be used in phonograph needles."

TIMBER GROWTH
Washington — U.S. forests contain 1,601 billion board feet of lumber, the U.S. Forest Service estimates. New growth adds 35 billion board feet a year.
