

Back Stairs: Instructions by Priest

By MERRIMAN SMITH
UPI White House Reporter
Washington - (UPI) - Back stairs at the White House: President Kennedy may have been a wee bit astonished in church last Sunday at Middleburg, Va., where Catholic services are held in the auditorium of the community center.

The priest, the Rev. Albert F. Pereira, took time out before his sermon to inform the worshippers that their bishop, the most Rev. John J. Russell, was in the area. Then Father Pereira went on to instruct his flock on how to greet a bishop, on the off chance they encountered him.

"You greet the bishop by genuflecting and then kissing his ring as a mark of respect for his office," the priest said. "You address the bishop as 'your excellency' or 'Bishop Russell!'"

President Well Versed
Some of the worshippers may not have known the protocol for meeting a bishop, but it is assumed that the President is well-versed in the customs of his church.

The priest then cautioned the participants in the mass to mind their church manners some of which are dictated by security rather than religious reasons wherever a President worships.

"Out of respect to our week end visitors," Father Pereira said, "you are requested to remain in your places until they have left the auditorium."

Then as a stern afterthought, the priest said, "Do not leave your places at all." Impressed by Camp David Kennedy was quite taken up by Camp David in his brief visit to the Navy - operated White House retreat in the Catoctin Mountains of Maryland. He met former President Dwight D. Eisenhower at the camp last Saturday for lunch to talk over the Cuban situation.

The Navy, of course, would be utterly delighted to have Kennedy make frequent use of Camp David as a matter of service pride, and also, for the added benefit of having the Chief Executive more closely connected to the Navy.

The Kennedys have a one-year lease on Glen Ora, their hunt country place outside Middleburg where Mrs. Kennedy particularly enjoys riding and fox hunting. The Navy undoubtedly would be happy to arrange bridge trails around Camp David. But to duplicate the rolling, open fields of Middleburg for hunting would require bulldozing several small mountains out of the way.

Overboard on Security
Last Saturday, with a President visiting Camp David for the first time and having a former President as his guest, the Navy went a bit overboard on security.

The camp commander, Lt. Cmdr. Tom Wynkoop, at one point was reluctant about giving his name to a reporter who asked simply why the Camp David sign had been taken down and replaced by a rather prim sign proclaiming only "Camp Three." Wynkoop gave his name only when the reporter became somewhat insistent.

The strict, sentry-enforced confinement of reporters and photographers to one building while they awaited the break-up of the Kennedy-Eisenhower meeting was attributed to "security."

Russians on Premises
Security of what? When Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev visited Eisenhower at Camp David in September, 1959, there were roughly 30 Russian secret agents on the premises at one time. It is ridiculous to think those Russian agents left without a pretty complete idea of the inner workings of Camp David.

Someone in the Navy also tried to tell press secretary Pierre Salinger that never before had reporters and photographers been admitted to the camp. This someone must be frightfully young or woefully uninformed. From whence came all these stories and pictures of Eisenhower and the numerous foreign visitors he entertained at the camp?

Central Point - A four-car accident occurred at the intersection of Highway 99 and Pine st. in Central Point about 4:10 p.m. Monday.

Central Point police said cars driven by Betty Olive Egles, 30, of route 1, box 38, Central Point, and Harry Larson, 46, of 3113 North Russet st., Portland, were stopped on the outside of the Highway 99 southbound lane waiting for a traffic signal.

The brakes failed in a car operated by Viola K. Christie, 59, of 6802 Lower River rd., Grants Pass, police said, causing the car to strike the rear of the Larson car, forcing it into the Egles car.

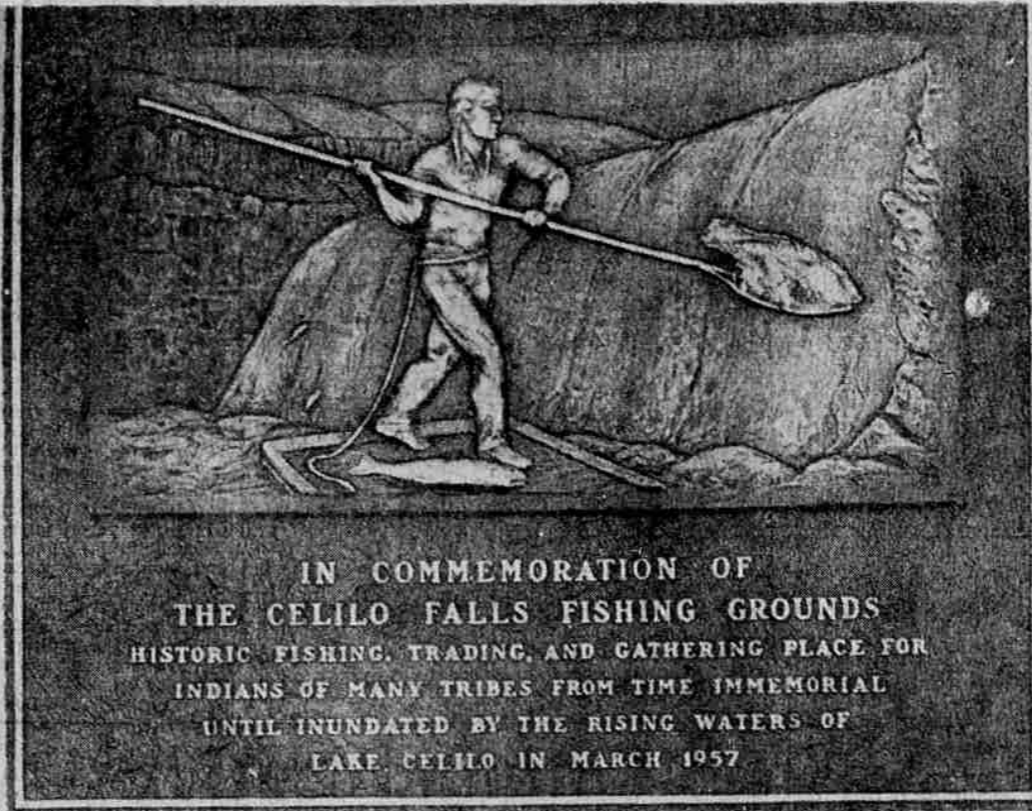

Mrs. Christie's car then went into the inside southbound lane and struck a vehicle driven by Virginia Louise Wilson, 17, of 3045 Table Rock rd.

Police said the Egles, Larson and Wilson cars were extensively damaged. Larson was taken to Rogue Valley hospital by ambulance, suffering from back and neck injuries.

No citations were issued, police said.
