It's Later Than They Think

No longer do we sit up till
Our teen-age child comes in,
And stay awake with rod-like will
Through drooping eyes and chin

At last, as we have proudly said,
We've gained some trust and sense,
We nonchalantly go to bed—
And lie there taut and tense.

—Richard Armour

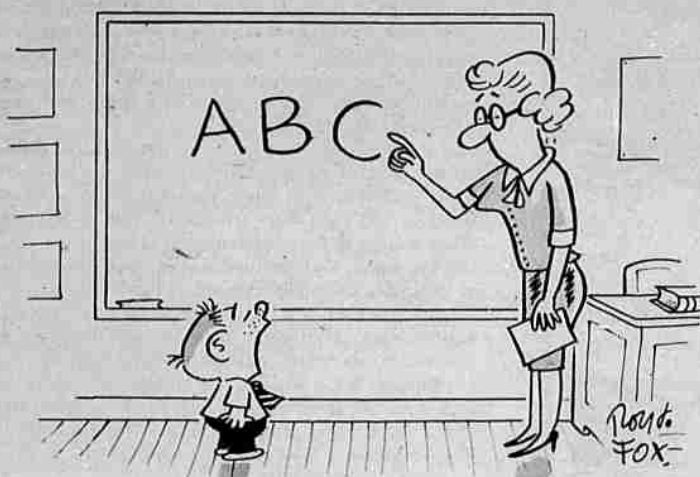

A confirmed bachelor believes marriages are made in heaven, and he's perfectly willing to wait.

—Ken Kraft

Lap of Luxury

Our shedding mutt's not a lap dog but
This much you can safely bet your pelf on:
As sure as I'm dressed to put on the dog,
I'm what the dog starts putting himself on!

—Georgie Starbuck Galbraith

"That's the letter 'C'—as in cowpoke, colt, cartridge, Comanche..."

Billy, only five, was already the terror of the neighborhood. When a nice youngster his own age moved in next door, Billy's mother hoped he would follow a good example.

One night she had a heart-to-heart talk with Billy. "I want you to spend more time with that new boy. He's so good. You never hear him say any naughty words."

"You will tomorrow," Billy said self-assuredly.

"Why?"

"Because I taught him a few today," Billy replied.

—Edna Elsaser

The real Western hero is the man who had enough brains to buy property there 20 years ago.

—Dan Bennett

A backwoods farmer, through canniness and luck, had accumulated a sizable fortune in oil. He acquired a large estate and built a mansion with a huge swimming pool. But before long he died, and his old friends came to commiserate with the widow.

"But at least he left you well off," said one former neighbor.

"Oh, yes," sobbed the widow. "At least $500,000."

"That much? Heavens! And him a man who couldn't read or write."

"Or swim," added the widow.

One of Hollywood's most famous and conceited stars was on location in a rural area and went shopping for antiques. He spotted a real buy. "Will you take a personal check for that item?" he confidently asked the elderly dealer.

"Guess so."

The star made out a check and signed it with the flourish of a man who loves to give autographs. "You know who that is, of course," he said with pride.

"Well," said the dealer, "I sure hope it's you!"
