Skill, Courage of Leaders Taxed, Orin Burrell Says

With U.S. gold reserves of $17 1/2 billion exceeded by foreign credits, the skill and courage of this nation's leaders will be taxed to the utmost in the period ahead.

This general observation was made by Orin K. Burrell, professor of finance, University of Oregon, in an address Tuesday before the Medford Rotary club.

His luncheon address at the Rogue Valley Country club was a feature of the first annual management conference here sponsored jointly by the Medford Chamber of Commerce and the university's school of business administration, general extension division.

"Gold is a magic word today, just as it was in the early days when the precious metal was discovered on Daisy creek at Jacksonville," the speaker said.

The integrity of the U.S. dollar is essential. That is why the President recently assured creditors that this country's gold reserves will secure the dollar. Cheap money advocates must recognize that the security of the nation is at stake.

Inflation is not necessary to national growth, Burrell told Rotary and chamber members. We cannot continue to try to maintain a hard dollar abroad and a soft dollar at home.

Faculty Members Attend Conference

Ashland - Three members of the Southern Oregon college social science department attended the Oregon Historian's conference at Portland university recently.

The meeting featured two papers, "The Enlightenment and Trade Unionism in Ireland in 1780" and "The Constituent Assembly in 1848 in France," presented by historians from Portland university and the University of Oregon.

Historian's of Oregon were organized three years ago. They meet quarterly. Dr. Haines stated they are concerned with historical research and the standards of teaching history and the social sciences on the high school level and raising standards of certification.
