

Research Developments To Be Presented at Medford Meeting

Late developments of research on wood products will be discussed at a meeting of the Pacific Northwest section, Forest Products Research society, at the Jackson hotel here Monday and Tuesday, according to Don Burnet, program chairman.

Two technical sessions and two field trips are planned. After registration at 8 a.m. Monday, the group will tour Timber Products company, with emphasis on its log control center and sawmill.

The afternoon session will include four subjects. D. J.

Miller, wood technologist at Oregon Forest Research center in Corvallis, will explain a long-term test of cross-ties from several west coast woods in main line tracks of the Southern Pacific company.

Protecting Lumber
Carl Rasmussen, director of research for Western Pine association, will review methods to protect lumber for exterior storage.

Timber quality standards will be discussed by Carl A. Newport, chief of forest economics research of the Pacific Northwest Forest and Range Experiment station at Portland.

Turpentine and tall oil from pulping residue of conifers will be explained by F. Cooper Ratliff, manager of paper products development for the Crown Zellerbach corporation at Camas, Wash.

Glenn Jackson, of the California Oregon Power company, will relate recent developments on high-lift helicopters for logging at a banquet Monday at 7 p.m.

Technical Session
The technical session Tuesday morning will start at 9 a.m. with a talk by Dr. Ben S. Bryant and Gerald F. Hoerber, of the Institute of Forest Products, Seattle, on thickness variation in dry Douglas fir veneer.

Dr. Lawrence Loney, also of the Institute of Forest Products in Seattle, will tell about a photographic study of veneer formation. Dr. Ben F. Cooper, Oregon State university, Corvallis, will discuss use of wood fiber in pharmaceuticals.

Influence of several variables on micro tensile strength of Douglas fir will be related by R. W. Kennedy, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, B.C.

Inter-Related Subjects
Several of the subjects to be presented are inter-related, and, together, provide information of value to members of wood industries, according to Burnet.

After the technical session, a tour is scheduled of the new plywood plant of Medford corporation.

Local arrangements are under the direction of Ralph Brindley, production engineer for Timber Products company in Medford.

The meeting will be attended by members of the Society from British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, and northern California, as well as by representatives of the various wood industries in the Northwest.
