New Forest Service Park on Applegate River Developed

By MAUDE ZIEGLER
Mail Tribune Correspondent
Applegate Valley — A new forest service park, known as the Jackson park located on the Applegate river a mile south of McKee bridge, is being developed by a forest service crew, and basic facilities are available now to early spring picnickers.

Driveways have been made through the area which is located on both sides of the river. The west side grounds are in two tracts. Sanitary facilities have been installed, a few rustic picnic tables placed and scenic pathways to a swimming area and other areas have been built.

E. A. Adams of this community is superintendent of Jackson park and other local forest parks at Wrangle Gap, Cook and Green, Hutton, Beaver Sulphur, and Thompson creek.

As funds are made available, fireplaces will be built at Jackson later in the season. A total of 28 picnic tables will be added, and safety, traffic and regulation signs will be erected. Poison oak eradication also is a future project, Neil Suttell, district ranger, explained.

Jackson park consists of 40 acres, and formerly was the Gebhart mining property acquired by Jackson county and turned over to the forest service. The setting is picturesque in that the park is located in Chinese mining tailings of a century ago and massive mounds of rocks cover the area. At some future time the forest service plans to maintain an exhibit of early day relics on the grounds.

During the summer, a farmers' irrigation dam marks the lower end of the swimming hole and adds to the beauty of the spot. Superintendent

Adams said the place has been popular with recreationists in summers past even without facilities of any kind.

Road Construction

Road construction at Jackson was done by the Medford forest service road crew and directed by Pete Gregory. Overall supervision of the development is under the direction of Robert Webb and Robert Snoch of Star Ranger station.

Suttell explained that site plans have been completed for new camp grounds on Steves Fork of Carbury and at China Flat, where trailers and tents will be permissible.

Site plans also are being prepared to bring up to date all present camp grounds of the Applegate district. Before applying for funds for the projects, the site plans must be approved at the regional office in Portland, Suttell said.
