

Art talent hunt being conducted in Oregon and Washington

Artists are needed all through the commercial art field. That is why an art talent hunt is being conducted in this area right now. Its purpose is to locate young men and women who like to draw and who have enough natural talent for an art career.

What about you? Are you one of those fortunate persons born with a gift for drawing? If you have always been sketching—even just on old envelopes or scraps of paper—this art talent hunt may be important for you. It could get you started towards the career that would make the fullest use of your abilities and talents—a rewarding career in commercial art.

You might choose advertising art—a large and rapidly expanding field in itself. This year, the total advertising investment will top 11 billion dollars—much of that going for art. All types of art are in demand for advertising. Drawings, paintings. Illustrations of everything from autos to fashions to children's toys. Illustrations of people, animals, scenes, faces, figures—almost anything. The realistic, the fanciful. Always something different.

Commercial art includes magazine cover painting. As a top "cover artist", your yearly income would run in five figures or even six. Commercial artists illustrate magazine stories, paperback covers, children's books, greeting cards. They draw cartoons. They are commissioned to paint murals for public buildings. Portraits for firms and institutions, for individuals.

If commercial art appeals to you, first get the opinion of professional artists as to your talent. You can do this, at no cost or obligation, by taking an Art Talent Test at home. A free copy will be sent you by a well-known art school. You take this test in your spare time, then mail it back. Professional artists at the school review your test and give you a private estimate of your talent. If your test shows promise, you will also get expert counsel as to your career in art. Satisfy yourself by taking this test! Mail the coupon today.
