Senator Speaks At Breakfast

The Four Freedoms speech of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1941 uniquely carved his greatness. "In this ringing statement of faith and purpose, the late president moved head on into the total challenges of his day and expressed for this nation its spiritual meanings."

So declared U.S. Senator Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota at a no-host breakfast Sunday morning at the Medford Hotel. The breakfast honored visiting Democratic candidates, officials and guests who remained overnight here from upstate, after the twelfth annual Roosevelt Memorial dinner held Saturday night at McLaughlin Junior High school.

Senator Wayne Morse introduced Senator McCarthy at the annual dinner which drew over 600. "Just before President Roosevelt was elected," Senator McCarthy said, "this nation had come to a low point in its history, the depression. Suddenly there were no jobs in the land of opportunity; no bread in the land of plenty. It was a nation in despair. FDR spoke with confidence, with ideas and action. The people listened and the nation got back on its feet."

"Next came 1940, the full horror of Nazism and World War 2. Many again were disillusioned. Then came the Four Freedoms speech, and a nation came alive with its own meanings. Today we have even more far flung threats and challenges. There could come disillusionment, but our nation again has national leadership alert to the challenges and equipped with the faith and courage to meet them head on," he said.

Senator McCarthy commended the Democrats of Jackson county for establishing "this living memorial to President Roosevelt" and the Eleanor Roosevelt league for doing honor to the former first lady who "not only continues to carry on the ideals and spirit of F.D.R., but contributes vastly to this nation and to the world on her own."

He said it was important that the young people of today be frequently reminded of what President Roosevelt meant to America in the 1930s and 1940s.

Following the breakfast, the Minnesota senator boarded a United Airlines plane for his return trip to Washington.

He spoke of a tentative plan to return to Rogue River valley with Mrs. McCarthy for a sightseeing tour, following a visit to the Seattle World's fair.

At the dinner he was presented a myrtle wood salad bowl set by the Roosevelt Memorial committee, while Senator Morse was presented the first Roosevelt Memorial dinner committee award, a myrtlewood plaque in the shape of Oregon with an encribed copper facing. Both senators were presented containers of the new combination pear fruit drink, now in the process of experimentation, by the Pear Industry and the Oregon Extension service.

The public is invited to attend. No charge will be made for the program but donations from those who wish to make them.

Musical entertainment will include songs by the Populaires, a singing group from the Southern Oregon college. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Miller of Melbourne, Australia, will present colored slides showing places of interest in Australia, including farm areas. Mr. Miller is an exchange teacher at the Medford High school.
