

Four Groups Gel Plaques in Event

Four groups competing in the recent music contest at Hedrick Junior High school received plaques for being the top winner in each of their divisions.

They are McLoughlin Junior High in the junior high bands class, Hedrick in the first four pieces, but there were no first, second, third and fourth place winners of the elementary choruses class, and in the junior high orchestra class, Hedrick and Ashland Junior High's string orchestra each received a plaque for finishing in a tie.

An earlier story indicated the schools finished in the first four places, but there were no first, second, third and fourth place winners of the elementary choruses class, and in the junior high orchestra class, Hedrick and Ashland Junior High's string orchestra each received a plaque for finishing in a tie.

Some Catholics Oppose Integration Order for Schools in New Orleans

Editors note: This is the second of two dispatches on the controversy in New Orleans over an order to integrate Catholic schools this fall. The author is UPI's national reporter.

By HARRY FERGUSON

New Orleans (AP)—There are 86,544 students in the parochial schools of the Archdiocese of New Orleans. Of that number, 12,772 are Negroes and have been attending separate schools.

Under an order issued by Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel the parochial schools will be fully integrated in September. Some Catholics here have rebelled against the archbishop's order and one of them, Mrs. B. J. Gaillot, has been excommunicated because of her segregation stand.

Mrs. Gaillot is president of an organization called "Save Our Nation Inc." She declines to reveal the extent of its membership. In addition to its stand against racial integration in the schools, Save Our Nation opposes the United Nations, federal aid to the states and American aid to foreign nations.

Made Letter Public

Mrs. Gaillot waited a few days after receiving a letter from the archbishop warning her that she stood in danger of excommunication. The letter was marked "personal and confidential," but she decided to make it public. Then she held a press conference and said that her study of the Bible had convinced her that God has revealed in Holy Writ that racial integration was a sin. This is where she collided head-on with the Roman Catholic Church which holds that it is a man's soul, not his color, that is vital.

Rummel's letter said he anticipated a reply from Mrs. Gaillot either in person or by writing. Mrs. Gaillot said she was willing to call on the archbishop, but insisted on taking two witnesses with her. This proposal was not accepted.

She then asked for an interview with a priest in the hope she could convince the church that its views on integration were erroneous. Mrs. Gaillot had a conversation with Father Joseph Costello, instructor in moral theology and church law at Notre Dame Seminary, and cited passages which she interprets as being in favor of segregation. The interview left her position and that of the church unchanged.

Won't Swerve
Mrs. Gaillot now says she will never swerve from her course, and she already is thinking in terms of martyrdom.

"Look what they did to Joan of Arc," she says.

The archbishop is not receiving reporters and is issuing no statements. Two documents have come from the Chancery of the Archdiocese. The order of March 28 announcing the integration of parochial schools in the fall and the letter warning Mrs. Gaillot of the danger of excommunication. Six Catholic laymen, headed by Harold Dittman, discussed the integration of an organization to support the church against Mrs. Gaillot. They were advised against it at the emergency and they disbanded.

Mrs. Gaillot's husband, Bernard, plans to ask the church to excommunicate him, too. They have three sons, aged 21, 16, and 14. They removed the eldest from De La Salle Catholic School because, according to Mrs. Gaillot, "he was being taught that Jesus and the Virgin Mary were black."

She cited the first chapter of the Solomon's Canticle of Canticles in the Catholic Bible: "I am black but beautiful, as the tents of Cedar, as the curtains of Solomon."

An explanatory note in the Catholic Bible states that the reference is to the church: "That is, the Church of Christ, founded in humility appearing outwardly afflicted and, as it were, black and contemptible; but inwardly, this is, in its doctrine and morally, fair and beautiful."

Judging from the size of their home, the Gaillots appear to be in moderate circumstances, but she says she plans to send her two younger sons to private schools if the parochial schools integrate in the fall. "We have friends who will help us with the financing."

The forthcoming integration of Catholic schools has attracted more attention than a recent court decision on public schools. Federal Judge J. Skelly Wright has just granted a petition by 102 Negro parents that all public schools in the city shall be integrated through the sixth grade in September. At present six public schools have been integrated with a total of 12 Negro pupils in the first and second grades.

There are 47 white grade schools in New Orleans and 21,110 white pupils. There are 40 Negro grade schools with an enrollment of 40,348.

September will be a fateful month in the history of New Orleans and Louisiana.
