Husband of Excommunicated Woman Asks Action by Church

New Orleans — (UPI) — Bernard J. Gaillot Jr., whose excommunicated wife dramatically knelt before a Roman Catholic archbishop Tuesday, said today he shared his wife's views on segregation and should be excommunicated with her.

Gaillot, 44-year-old parts clerk, expressed his views in a letter to Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel today. He asked the archbishop for a reply.

Mrs. Gaillot and two other segregation leaders were excommunicated by Archbishop Rummel for what was called their disobedience to the church.

Declines To Answer

Mrs. Gaillot, president of Save Our Nation, Inc., which insists that the Bible demands segregation, broke into a pilgrimage on the Notre Dame Seminary campus Tuesday. She fell on her knees before the 86-year-old archbishop and asked God to "have mercy" on the prelate for his integration stand.

She asked the archbishop to admit he erred in excommunicating her.

The archbishop did not answer. A group of women making the pilgrimage through the seminary began reciting the Rosary. The archbishop then walked to his residence.

In his letter to Archbishop Rummel, Gaillot defended his wife's segregation activities, which included picketing and publishing pamphlets against segregation in the public and parochial schools.

Gaillot told United Press International that he too had picketed Coadjutor Archbishop John P. Cody's residence. Segregationists have claimed that Archbishop Cody, recently sent here from Kansas City, is the real power behind the desegregation of parochial schools and the excommunication orders.

Gaillot said he forbade his wife to go into an audience with Archbishop Rummel without taking two witnesses along. Mrs. Gaillot's insistence on two witnesses caused declays and finally cancellation of a scheduled audience with the archbishop.

Mrs. Gaillot said she was not planning any other efforts to contact the archbishop. She said the next move in her appeal for him to reconsider the excommunication order was up to him. She emphasized she did not kneel before him to lift the excommunication or to beg forgiveness for her pro-segregation fight.

Archbishop Rummel excommunicated Mrs. Gaillot, political leader Leander H. Perez Sr., and Jackson G. Ricau, executive director of the South Louisiana White Citizens Council, last Monday.

All three publicly opposed the archbishop's order desegregating 153 Catholic schools in southeast Louisiana next fall. They said they would appeal their excommunications to the Vatican.

Statute Repeal On Expenditure Ceiling Proposed

Washington — (UPI) — A special commission today recommended to President Kennedy that national campaigns in 1964 and 1968 be financed partly by making contributions to major political parties tax deductible.

The commission also recommended repeal of federal statutory ceilings of $3 million a year on expenditures of national political committees and the annual limit of $5,000 per person on individual contributions to each committee. It called the limits "meaningless."

Drafted by Committee

The report was drafted and turned over to Kennedy by a special committee headed by Alexander Heard, dean of the Graduate School, University of North Carolina. The President's Commission on Campaign Costs was set up last November.

The most detailed proposal by the commission was for establishment of tax incentives for political contributions, largely designed to encourage a larger number of small and medium-size gifts.

Tax Credit Allowed

Under one plan, smaller contributors would be allowed up to an outright $10 tax credit per year. A husband and wife filing a joint return could claim an annual tax credit of $20 provided they had contributed as much as $40. A $10 credit would be permitted for individuals contributing as much as $20.

As an alternative, the commission also suggested permitting a deduction in the manner of contributions to charity, of up to $1,000 per year per tax return.

Dream of Politically United Europe Fades as Talks Falter

Paris — (UPI) — The dream of a politically united Europe faded today with the foreign ministers of the six European Common Market nations deadlocked over Britain's entry in the Common Market.

The ministers wound up a one-day meeting Tuesday without making any formal plans for resuming their talks or for a six-nation "little summit" conference which they had hoped to set up for this spring in Rome to sign a treaty for a "union of European peoples."

The six Common Market countries—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—have made little progress since they started work last October on a blueprint for a politically united Western Europe.

Their deadlock became complete after Belgium and the Netherlands told the conference Tuesday that they would not sign any political unity treaty until Britain becomes a Common Market member.
