

EASTER SALE!

REWARD—Clementina O'Day, 7-months-old, got this black eye in her efforts to obtain a piece of birthday cake. She was helping her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George O'Day, observe their joint birthdays when they showed her the cake. She reached for it and her grandfather pulled it from her grasp. To show her displeasure, she banged her face on the tray of her high-chair, resulting in the shiner. She got a piece of cake. (UPI)

Vegetables Set Pace for Frozen Food Industry

Washington—(UPI)—The "hottest" thing in cold storage is frozen vegetables, according to the Agriculture department.

Frozen vegetables, the department said, have set the pace for the booming frozen foods industry, and they occupy an increasing share of the rapidly growing freezer space.

In 1941, the average American ate only seven-tenths of a pound of frozen vegetables. By 1961, this had multiplied to about 11 pounds per person. The vegetable freezing industry boosted its production during the same time from 106 million to 2.2 billion pounds.

In 1941, the nation's freezer storage rooms held an average of 74 million pounds of frozen vegetables on the first day of each month. In 1961, the monthly vegetable stocks averaged more than a billion pounds, about 31 per cent of the total weight of frozen food in storage.

The department's April 1 cold storage report showed that holdings of frozen vegetables slipped below the billion-pound mark for the first time since Aug. 1, 1961. A 63-million pound reduction last month lowered holdings to 975 million pounds.

During 1961, total holdings of frozen vegetables reached an all time high of 1.3 billion pounds. New storage records were set for frozen lima beans, green beans, broccoli, carrots, cauliflower, corn, peas, spinach and french fried potatoes.

The year also produced the high mark for stocks of several other items: $99 million pounds of frozen fruits, including record stock of blueberries and cherries; 550 million pounds of frozen poultry, of which a record 382 million pounds were turkeys; and 50 million gallons of frozen orange concentrate.

These and other food inventories in both cooler and freezer rooms on Nov. 1 made up the largest product weight ever stored under refrigeration at one time—almost 8 billion pounds.

During most of 1961, holdings were at new high levels for the date, averaging 5.5 billion pounds per month. This average dropped on April 1 this year to a record 5.2 billion pounds for the date.

Dedication of New Laboratory Set

Corvallis — Dedication of the new Forest Research Laboratory of the Pacific Northwest Forest and Range Experiment Station has been set for June 1 at 1:30 p.m. at Oregon State university.

Forest scientists at the laboratory will do research on control of forest insect pests and diseases, forest genetics, tree physiology, and watershed management.

Robert W. Cowlin, director of the Pacific Northwest Forest and Range Experiment Station, U.S. forest service, Portland, announced the dedication.

The laboratory is located three blocks west of the present OSU school of forestry building adjacent to a site reserved for a new forestry building in the future.

Work at the new federally-operated laboratory will be coordinated with studies under way in the OSU school of forestry, the OSU Forest Research Laboratory, and the school of science.
