

Ashland Business Women Plan Dinner, Other Events

Ashland-Club activities begin early in May and continue throughout the month for Ashland Business and Professional Women as members go into a final round of club events of the year. First will be Wednesday, May 2, when an initiation dinner will be held at North's Chuck Wagon in Medford. Miss Gladys Durand, president of Medford BPW, will hold the initiating team.

Friday and Saturday, May 4 and 5, the Ashland group will conduct its spring rummage sale at the Pioneer Village market under the chairmanship of Mrs. Sylvia Snyder and Mrs. Hope Jones.

Later in the month a mother and daughter tea is to be given in honor of the senior high school girls who have won the term awards and worn the BPW club pin. At that time the Girl of the Year will be named and given a $25 U.S. Savings bond.

Ashland seniors chosen for the term title during the year have been Joy Fahrenhurst, Janet Miller, Barbara Moore, Judy Benson and the present holder, Joy Hinkson. The final term winner has not yet been named. Joy Hinkson was pinned at the April BPW meeting by Judy Benson.

The current holder of the club honor award is a member of the Pep club and Rally squad. Future Teachers of America, Flag Girls, Quill and Scroll, orchestra and chorus. She is secretary-treasurer of the National Honor society, and has been chosen to take part in the May Music festival at Forest Grove.

Report of the nominating committee is to be presented at the May 2 dinner meeting by Mrs. Louise Myers and election of new officers will take place. They will be installed in June. Mrs. Jacqueline Lewis has served as president of the club this year.

Will Meet

Rogue Valley club, Navy Mothers of America, has scheduled a meeting for 10 a.m., Tuesday, May 1 in Santo hall on Columbus street. A covered dish luncheon will be served at noon and a business meeting will be conducted in the afternoon.

New York City has its Easter Sunday parade, and Medford has its Easter Monday luncheon. Of course, New York City women have oceans of money and many high fashion shops to patronize, but the women who attended the luncheon, (and the Hillcrest Cancer committee's Jewelerama Thursday) wore fashionable and pretty clothes and the hats were some of the most interesting of recent years.

The women of St. Anne's Altar society certainly had a smash idea when they decided to choose ten "Fairiest Women"—the "fairest" meaning well dressed, well groomed and appealing in the judge's opinion. Arriving at the Country club, Potpourri decided as soon as we saw Mrs. Dan Hull that she might be one of the 10, and she was.

Eileen wore a two-piece beige suit of silk and one of the artificial fibers and her elegant wide hat was of tones of beige trimmed with fabric roses. Mrs. Hull makes most of her own wardrobe, and her Easter suit was handmade.

Mrs. David Legg wore a modish Trilene black silk dress made coachman style with a white straw hat and black patent shoes and bag. Another woman who made the "10 best" list was Mrs. Paul R. McCulloch, Portland, who had come down to spend Easter with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Ness, who live on Bradford way. She wore a handsome black and white print ensemble with black and white straw hat.

The judges really surprised one of their choices—Mrs. James Mulaney. The three women who made the selections announced that Mrs. Mulaney was the prettiest "lady in waiting"—she wore a two-piece black suit and a hat of dozens of pale pink flowers.

Mrs. Ernest Flakus also wore beige, her ensemble being a silk jacket dress with pleated skirt. Her hat, trimmed with large flowers, was of hot pink color and her gloves matched. Mrs. Michael Popov's dress was of Dior blue and with it she wore a print coat and a hat of blue organdy flowers.

A score of adjectives are used to describe pink this spring, and Mrs. Jerry Olson and Potpourri decided that her chic suit is of raspberry pink. The suit material is silk and wool and her bonnet-shaped hat, of the exact same shade of pink, is of silk organza.

Mrs. Floyd (Bessie) Riley wore a print frock with a coat of spring green and a small flower hat; her accessories included a many-strand necklace. Mrs. Lewis Ulrich also wore beige. Her dress was of embroidered material and her jeweled sweater and hat were of matching beige.

Also wearing a pale color was Mrs. E. D. Davis, who said she cannot decide whether the linen suit should be called pale beige or light bone color. Her straw hat is beige colored and trimmed with veiling and apricot colored roses.

The committee of judges, Mrs. Edward C. Kelly, Mrs. Frank Van Dyke and Mrs. Fred Spiegelberg, had a rough time trying to make up their minds, and hastened to announce that many women not chosen were also very smartly dressed and hatted. Potpourri would have chosen any one of the judges for her own list. We also considered Mrs. James Redden, who looked charming in a suit of wine colored material worn with white accessories. Another who qualified for a "10 best" list was Mrs. Robert Wells, who wore a beige suit of textured material and a chic hat of apricot colored roses. Mrs. Wells owns a business in Anchorage, Alaska, and divides her times between the Rogue valley and the northern state. Her companion at the luncheon was Mrs. Leonard T. Anderson who wore a spring dress of green silk with matching hat. Both the Wells and the Andersons live at Gold Key.

We cannot now remember what suit or dress Mrs. William Tyner wore, but we haven't forgotten her devastating pink fur hat—or maybe it is feathers. Potpourri also liked the way Mrs. J. P. Tobin looked in a black rough straw hat with the fashionable roller brim, and a print frock.

Since the Easter Monday luncheon has grown to be such a large event, it takes many committee women. Mrs. Bernard J. Stromberg and Mrs. John Strobel took care of announcements and prizes and Mrs. Van Calhoun and Mrs. Edward Guldin escorted the "Fairiest." Others working as hostesses were Mrs. Floyd Darland, Mrs. John Snider, Mrs. Donald Sweeney, Mrs. Jerome Hunter, Mrs. Alex Austin, Mrs. Mario Campagna, Mrs. Frank Glonning, Mrs. Norman Croy, Mrs. Ervin Hogan, Mrs. Thomas Lorenz, Mrs. Thomas Gass, Mrs. J. L. Dubay, Mrs. Richard Woodcock, Mrs. Robert Howard, Mrs. Herbert Dungey, Mrs. Richard Coats and Mrs. John Petrusich.

For the last few years one always sees the same three men at the Easter party—Father Mai, Club Manager Jimmy Dunlevy and Jack Stong, who provides the organ music.

Potpourri was surprised to learn last Tuesday that women playing in tournaments sponsored by the Oregon Women's Golf association may not wear slacks or certain other trousers. They may wear shorts of certain length, skirts and I presume, culottes. Tuesday was cold, but most of the women wore shorts—and shivered. No one seemed to have a reasonable explanation, and looking around at the many women who played that day in the tournament, Potpourri decided that whoever laid down the law surely didn't have either comfort or common sense appearance in mind. O.S.

So crowded was Rogue Valley Country club for the annual Easter Monday luncheon of St. Anne's Altar society that tables were set up in every nook and cranny. Seated at a table in the hall were Mrs. Andrew Schmidt (at left) and Mrs. Charles Peterson (center). Chatting with the two guests is Mrs. R. E. Randolph, general chairman for the party.
