

Mentalist Performs for Knife, Fork Audience

"The supernatural is the natural not as yet understood," DeMille, a mentalist, told an audience Thursday evening of the Rogue River Valley Knife and Fork club at the Rogue Valley Country club.

The comment concluded an evening of feats by DeMille dealing with sub conscious mind, telepathy, psychological control and the forecasting of events.

The program concluded with the opening of a package by a member of the audience which had been mailed from Texas April 25 to the club's secretary. The sealed package, opened on the stage, contained

Increase Expected In World Air Travel

Montreal - (UPI) - World air passenger traffic is expected to set new records in 1962, according to the International Air Transport Association. IATA foresees an 8 per cent increase following a 6 per cent increase during 1961.

The outlook for air cargo business also is promising. IATA foresees an 8 per cent increase in cargo tonnage by no less than 300 per cent over the next 10 years, according to Sir Hudson Fysh, IATA president.

Canada produces five times as much newspaper as all of the so-called communist countries combined.

Constitutional Revision Gives Increased Powers to Governor

Salem—The way was pointed toward a more powerful governor by the Constitutional Revision Commission in a recent meeting here. It voted that the new Constitution will provide that the governor be the only elected executive officer.

The Commission is drafting a proposed Constitution for the next session of the Legislature. If the Legislature approves it will be passed on to the people for their vote.

The policy of electing a governor only passed 9-6. It had been recommended by the commission's executive subcommittee.

Functions Consolidated

Left unsettled, however, were additional subcommittee recommendations that all executive functions of government be gathered into not more than 20 departments under the governor's direction, and that the governor have the power to reorganize departments subject to legislative veto of his plans.

Other highlights of the commission's meeting included creating an office of controller to handle post-audit functions, slightly increasing the signatures needed on initiative and referendum petitions, continuing the emergency board, and streamlining the militia and education articles.

Policies adopted by the Commission included:

- The number of signatures needed on initiative petitions for constitutional amendments will be increased 14 per cent, those needed for statutory initiatives will be increased 7 per cent, and those needed on petitions referring a legislative act will be increased 14 per cent.

Annual Sessions

The emergency board, which parcels out money to branches of the government for contingencies unseen during the legislative session, will be continued although the Legislature, under the new Constitution, will meet annually instead of every two years. A subcommittee had recommended that the emergency board be dropped.

The long and detailed militia article was stripped to a statement that the Legislature will provide for a militia for the defense of the state and the nation.

The equally detailed education article was stripped to a command that the Legislature provide for a system of common schools and that it provide for preserving school lands and the Common School Fund.

An office of controller was established. It might be elective or appointive, depending on the Legislature's will. The controller will audit the state's books but will have no executive functions. Post audit is now handled by the secretary of state, who is also an executive officer.

Existing methods of amending the constitution will be preserved and one method will be added: the people may by initiative call a constitutional convention. However, amendments submitted by the Legislature must pass both houses by minimum two-thirds majorities instead of simple majorities, as at present.

Transferred to Statutes

Present constitutional detail about operating elections will be transferred to the statutes.

Present provisions for continuity of government in case an enemy attack wipes out large portions of the government will be continued.

There will be no limit on the number of consecutive terms a governor may serve. The governor is now limited to serving no more than eight years out of any 12 consecutive years.

Existing qualifications for governor will be continued. These are U.S. citizenship, a minimum age of 30 years and not less than three years residence.

The governor's ability to enter local law enforcement situations when he believes the law is not being enforced will be preserved.

The governor will continue to address the Legislature about state problems from time-to-time and will be able to call special sessions.

A section requiring a state census every ten years midway between federal censuses, which has never been enforced, will be dropped.

Counties may continue to be subdivided for Senate and House seats if the county comprises a single legislative district. But it will also be possible to split counties for Senate seats.

Open To Public

Legislative sessions must be open to the public at all times. However, the Commission rejected a subcommittee recommendation that committee sessions must also be open. Members feared such a rule would make it impossible for legislative committees to investigate allegedly bad situations without the danger of harming innocent parties.

Provided that laws still will not take effect until 90 days after the Legislature adjourns unless the emergency clause is attached.

Deleted the provision that an elected officer who is elected to another position must resign his office prior to taking the new position.

Police Subdue Young Car Thief

Tacoma - (UPI) - An 18-year-old Tacoma youth was being held in city jail here Thursday charged with stealing a City of Tacoma car and driving it to Olympia.

In the chase, Olympia police said the stolen car rammed a patrol car driven by Patrolman Earl Fey. Jones and reserve Patrolman Paul Greeley chased the youth after he jumped from the car.
