University Symposium Team Discusses Education

A University of Oregon symposium team, addressing Medford Kiwanis club Wednesday, discussed what the solution should be to the problem in Oregon higher education caused by increased enrollment.

Miss Suzy Thompson, a former Medford resident, proposed raising admission standards to limit enrollment. Gary Stark opposed restricting enrollment and advocated additional financing to take care of the program.

Dennis Taylor spoke in support of junior colleges. Miss Judy Sims, Medford, advocated the deferred enrollment plan in which students not showing academic promise would not be admitted to school in the fall but their enrollment would be delayed until the winter term.

Thompson maintained. She expressed the feeling that available facilities should be used for "deserving students" than providing mediocre education to all.

Miss Sims stated that junior colleges cannot lower the cost and will not ease the load since other students are attracted. She declared also that the high grade point average and test are too strict a method to follow at the present time.

Miss Thompson pointed to a "breaking point" in taxes, and said that it is not realistic and is a mistake to try to educate every student who wants a college education.

Admission of all lowers the quality of education, Miss Thompson maintained. She also said that out-of-state enrolees should be limited to one-third of the incoming freshman class.

Taylor also opposed restricting enrollment. He pointed out education is needed more and more. He told of the growing demand for semi-professional skilled workers and said that junior colleges can provide terminal vocational education. Junior colleges could be merged with high schools and thereby qualify for federal aid as secondary school, he claimed.

She proposed the policy which will be tried out next school year at University of Oregon in which enrollment of students of 2.5 GPA will be admitted automatically and others, with a 2 GPA or better in high school will be admitted but their enrollment deferred. She said this will lessen the burden on the fall term.

This is not closing the door to anyone with a 2 GPA or better, Miss Sims stated. There is a 5.9 per cent drop-out of students after the fall term at University of Oregon.

Frank Ross Notes Retirement From Federal Service

The retirement of Frank E. Ross, 1325 Winchester ave., a field engineer with the bureau of reclamation, was announced recently. Ross had been in government service for 29 years. He had been associated with the Talent project since December, 1954.

Signments in regard to land acquisition at Howard Prairie and Emigrant lakes and moving of Hill cemetery at Emigrant and the design and supervision of construction of the Howard Prairie recreation area. Born in Area He was born on Blackhill in 1887 where his father was gold mining. He attended Central Point schools, and is a 1921 graduate of Oregon State university, where he received his bachelor of science degree.

Turf Landing Field For Diamond Lake Region Is Planned

Roseburg—A turf-type landing field to serve Diamond Lake recreation area will be developed soon, Ralph McGinnis, Salem, assistant director for the Oregon state board of aeronautics, told 30 representatives of agencies and organizations interested in the project at a meeting in Roseburg last week.

spot would be near the central resort area. Vondis Miller, Umpqua National Forest supervisor, said there are two or three possible sites. The board will survey the area for the landing strip as soon as the winter's snows are gone, McGinnis said. Purpose will be to select, in cooperation with the forest service, a suitable site and determine construction costs.

Spring Weather Opens Roads in Winema Forest

Klamath Falls—The spring weather has opened up many roads and recreation areas on the Winema National forest. The Chemult Ranger district reported that most of the main roads in the north end of the forest are now dry and open to traffic. The Walker Mountain road is closed by snow and the lower end is under construction. The Miller Lake road is open only to Deer Butte, and it will be several weeks before the road in to Miller Lake campground is driveable, rangers said.

and White Pine picnic area are open for public use and received moderate use last week. Aspen Point campground is temporarily closed while expansion of the campground is proceeding. Present plans call for this enlarged campground to be opened later this season.

Main roads north of the Sprague river, the Chiloquin Ranger district reported, are for the most part open. Travel on the district south of the Sprague river is hazardous because of wet and muddy roads, and is not recommended.

Lake of the Woods Roads Roads around Lake of the Woods on the Klamath district are now open except for the Lake of the Woods-Fish Lake road. This road is muddy and impassable. The road along the West side of Klamath lake and the road to Sevenmile Guard Station are open. Roads leading to the higher elevation areas are still closed by snow.

It is recommended that travel be limited to surfaced roads until the roadbeds have settled, district rangers said, as travel during wet conditions could cause heavy damage.

In the Lake of the Woods area Rainbow Campground Safety Rules Planned For Parachute Jumpers Rules to provide greater safety for sport parachuting, or "sky diving," have been proposed by the Federal Aviation Agency.

Will Seek Support Since the state board does not have sufficient funds in its current budget for a complete airport development it probably will seek support from various public agencies, flying groups and other organizations for the landing strip development. One of the major problems would be earth-moving, the assistant director said.
