

Candidates Talk Of Home Rule at Chamber Lunch

Ashland — The proposed Jackson County Home Rule Charter figured prominently in talks by the seven candidates for county judge here Tuesday. The candidates spoke at the weekly Ashland Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

Earl M. Miller, Republican incumbent, said that while he did not concur in the charter in its entirety, he thought it was a step in the right direction.

Homer A. Conger, Republican, and K. C. Wernmark, Democrat, both attacked the charter. Conger said he was against it, because "the appointments will be experts." He charged that experts are expensive and usually are from a distance. "I am not an expert," he added.

Wernmark accused the Charter proponents of using "any tactics they can" in a last-minute effort to get the measure passed.

In other matters, John L. Gregory and Ralph A. James both Democrats, said they would take steps to improve the recreational areas of the county and bring in new industry.

Miller said he felt the county judge should not concern himself with industry and tourism other than to support chamber of commerce efforts to stimulate the influx of each. He spoke of the numerous problems in the county's future, including the situation created by rural areas' becoming urbanized.

Harry E. Hawk, Republican, urged steps to get tourists to come off the freeway when it is completed and into Ashland and other county cities.

Evan E. Rasmussen spoke of his background in farming, including serving as vice president of the Talent Irrigation district.

Washington—Six House investigators bluntly told the Army Wednesday the administration has failed to sell them on the need for a military reorganization plan which would eliminate eight National Guard and Army Reserve divisions.
