Religious Groups Sponsor Buildings at Seattle's Fair

By PEG HUTCHINSON
Mail Tribune Church Editor

In the midst of the Seattle World's Fair showing the achievements of man there are three buildings sponsored by religious groups.

They are the Christian Witness Pavilion, sponsored by 36 Christian groups in the Seattle area; the Christian Science Pavilion, sponsored by Church of Christ, Scientist, and the Moody Institute Pavilion, sponsored by the Christian Businessmen's Committee of Seattle.

The Witness Pavilion is a striking building, although nearly dwarfed by the U. S. Science Pavilion which it is near. The structure is topped by a series of laminated arches and with a 50-foot cross.

Wood Mosaic

Inside the building there is a wood mosaic, consisting of some 40,000 small pieces of wood, depicting the concern of the church for the children of Century 21. On another wall is the stained glass window which is keyed to the Pavilion's theme "Jesus Christ—The Same, Yesterday, Today and Forever."

A seven minute black and white sound film, "Son Et Lumiere" is shown in a small auditorium. Through the use of light and sound and a "little imagination" the film relates man's birth, life, and death to the Biblical theme of creation, redemption, and hope.

Upon leaving the auditorium visitors may watch children at play in the children's center. Also in the building are a small chapel and displays, and a chaplain is available to give assistance.

Three Films

The Christian Science exhibit includes a variety of displays explaining the activities of this religion throughout the world. Three films are shown continuously in various parts of the two story structure.

The white columned building is restful for the weary tourist at the Fair. A waterfall, splashing over rocks, divides the ramp between the two floors and forms a pool outside the glass wall of a reading room on the first floor. There, a wide variety of Christian Science literature is available for all.

The third Pavilion consists of a 300-seat theater where films "Sermons on Science" are shown throughout the day. Dr. George Speake of the Moody Institute of Science, Los Angeles, relates scientific knowledge to the Gospels. These films have been shown in many Rogue valley churches and will be familiar to many church members.

One explains the present day application of the "spiritual science" demonstrated by Christ in the healing of sickness and sin," according to the teachings of Christian Science. Another shows the activities at one of the churches, and the third tells the story of the Christian Science Monitor newspaper. Nearby are telephones where visitors may hear international correspondents of the Monitor give recorded news reports.
