

Legislature Candidates Matched for November Ballot

Morse Easily Rolls Over Gilbert; Unander Shunts Durno Into Limbo

Portland —UPI— Oregon Democrats cast a healthy vote of confidence for Sen. Wayne Morse Friday, while Republicans chose former State Treasurer Sig Unander to oppose him, shunting Rep. Edwin Durno into political limbo. Durno had negated his political future on winning the GOP nomination for the U. S. Senate. He forfeited his fourth district Congressional seat to enter the race. Unander led Durno in 28 counties. He held a comfortable overall margin.

Fourth Term
Morse easily rolled over his lone primary opponent, Portland labor union member Charles Gilbert. Morse held a 4-1 lead in his bid for nomination for a fourth Senate term. It was the first time Morse had faced the voters since he lost to President Kennedy in the 1960 Oregon presidential primary. Durno had campaigned as "the most opposite to Morse" in a field of six. Unander had campaigned as a more liberal Republican.

Levy Measures Win In Upstate County
Hillsboro —UPI— County zoning and road levy measures won in Washington county voting, but a measure for a county museum was defeated. Unofficial returns showed the zoning measure on top by 14,466 to 9,923. The road levy vote was 14,335 to 10,361. The county museum measure went down 16,561 to 7,987.

Donald Willey took an upset victory over incumbent Joe Jaross for the Democratic county judge nomination by a vote of 6,352 to 3,898. Willey will oppose Clayton Nyberg in November.

Scott Mills, farmer, R. F. Cook, Portland contractor Jim Bacaloff, and Corvallis landscape architect Glenn Brixey trailed.

Durno, a Medford doctor for decades, was in San Francisco, and did not say what he planned to do after completing his current term in Congress.

Morse, who bolted the Republican party in 1952 and first ran as a Democrat in 1956, said, "I deeply appreciate the vote of confidence and support which the many voters in the Democratic party gave me." He said he will run on his record of 18 years of service to the people of Oregon.

Lists Occupation
Unander served as a federal maritime commissioner during the final year and a half of the Eisenhower administration. He lists his occupation as real estate and investments.

Durno said in a statement that he would not run for a fourth term.

Hartman to Oppose Green for Congress
Portland —UPI— Drugist Stanley Hartman won the Republican nomination today to oppose Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) in the November election.

Complete, unofficial returns from the third district gave Hartman 27,750 votes to 23,169 for truck driver Wint Blackwell. Hartman's partner in the drug store business, Howard Steinbach, was one of the two opponents defeated by Mrs. Green.

Nilson Swamps Davis For Labor Position
Portland —UPI— Incumbent Oregon Labor Commissioner Norman Nilson swamped Portland restaurant operator Vic Davis in Friday's primary to win renomination to the post.

He will face Pat Blair, Salem employer representative, in the November election. Nilson, who has held the job for two terms, won in every county in the state. Blair was unopposed.

at Berkeley, Calif., this morning he has wired his congratulations to Unander, and added, "I want to thank the many people who worked on my campaign, and to thank my opponents for conducting a clean, high-level campaign."

Tax Base Measure Defeated; Salary Proposal Approved

Portland —UPI— Oregon voters sent down a tax base measure on the statewide ballot to whopping defeat Friday, when surprised themselves by deciding to let the Legislature set its own salary.

Measure No. 1, the tax base proposal, was junked by a wide margin. It would have: 1. given local taxing districts a means of preventing a loss of their tax base 2. permitted the first levy by a new tax district to be made without an election, and 3. allowed districts leeway in deciding when a new tax proposal should go before the voters.

Supporters of the plan, which would have amended the 6 per cent limitation in the Oregon Constitution, said it was needed for orderly government. Opponents said it would raise taxes — enough to scare any voter.

The third phase only of the plan will appear on the November ballot, under arrangements made by the 1961 Legislature.

Approval of Measure No. 2 — legislative pay — was a big victory for Oregon's underpaid legislators, who get $600 a year. Nearly complete returns gave the measure an

Acree Controls On Sugar Beet Growers Unlikely

Washington —UPI— Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman indicates that he probably won't have to impose acreage controls on sugar beet producers next year.

This forecast depends, however, on passage of the administration's new sugar bill. Freeman appeared before the House Agriculture committee to testify on the sugar bill. The measure provides an increase in marketing quotas for domestic producing areas.

There have been no acreage controls on sugar beet production since 1960. Industry leaders had been warning that controls might be needed again in 1963. But Freeman said that if the new sugar bill passes "it is questionable whether acreage restrictions would be needed in 1963."

Possible in Future
Beyond 1963, however, Freeman conceded it may be necessary to restore controls on beet acreage, partly because per-acre yields are rising. But the secretary said that if controls are necessary, the acreage for established beet growers probably won't be cut below the 1961 level.

In 1961, farmers planted 1,128,000 acres of beets. USDA's preliminary estimate for this year shows an increase of 55,000 acres.

In addition to holding the line on acreage for established growers, the administration bill would open the door to some new sugar beet producers.

Marketing Quota
The bill provides that if acreage is controlled, a marketing quota of 50,000 tons each year would be reserved for new producers. This would be enough to allow the opening of one new beet factory in each of the five years covered by the proposed new sugar bill.

Freeman also testified that it may be necessary to restrict cane sugar production in Louisiana and Florida next year, even with the increase quotas provided in the administration bill. But Freeman said it's not likely that he will have to reduce acreage below this year's total of about 445,000 acres.

Oregon Petitions For Wheat Rate
Salem —UPI— Oregon has filed a petition with the Interstate Commerce Commission for a rate reduction to support a May 26 cut in rail rates to effect export hard winter wheat moving west from Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Kansas City, Mo.

Jonel C. Hill, state public utility commissioner, said the rate reduction will drop the present rates of 82 cents and 99½ cents to 71 and 82 cents respectively, depending upon which of the four points of origin are involved.

Hatfield, Thornton, Old Political Foes, Paired in Race for Governor

Portland —UPI— Gov. Mark Hatfield and Democratic Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton, already outspoken foes, handily won their parties' nominations for governor Friday. They wasted no time in opening

Most Incumbent Legislators Win Renomination Bids

Portland —UPI— Incumbent senators and representatives bidding for reelection in the Oregon Legislature came out strong in Friday's primary. Most apparently were renominated.

One exception was in the 28th representative district in eastern Oregon where Rep. Frank M. Weatherford (D-Olex) lost to Jack B. Smith, Condon. The district, one of the new ones formed by the 1961 reapportionment, is composed of Gilliam, Morrow, Sherman, Umatilla and Wheeler counties.

In the hot Republican state Senate race in the new Benton-Polk district, Walter Leth, Salem, won over Francis W. Ziegler, Corvallis. Both are senators now, but one of them had to step down because reappointment merged their separate Benton and Polk districts into one.

what promised to be a bitter campaign. Thornton, who mowed down State Sen. Walter Pearson of Portland by a surprising 3-1 margin, coupled his victory statement with a stinging attack on Hatfield.

He at once challenged Hatfield to debate "without his expensive retinue of college cronies."

Face to Face
Hatfield, who easily defeated his single primary opponent, Portland engineer George Altwater, by a hefty 3-1 margin, replied, "I shall be happy to meet my opponent face to face along the campaign trail."

Thornton accused Hatfield of costly out-of-state trips in pursuit of the Republican vice presidential nomination. He also said Hatfield failed to keep first term campaign promises of economy in government and tax reduction.

Match Record
Hatfield retorted he would match his own record with Thornton's "philosophy which can only mean higher taxes . . . ridicule of industrial development . . . costly investigations, overrulings, and destroying of reputations of communities and individuals."

Thornton's strong defeat of Pearson came in spite of last minute endorsement of Pearson by Democratic Rep. Edith Green. Portland area voters demonstrated Mrs. Green's own popularity, but spurned her recommendation of Pearson, giving Thornton a 2-1 lead in Pearson's own Portland stronghold.

Butted Heads
Thornton had the backing of Oregon party leaders, while Pearson, a conservative, had butted heads often with the party.

Dan N. Cox of Springfield and M. A. Yegge of Eugene lagged behind in the Democratic primary.

Hatfield, 39, grew in national stature two years ago when he nominated Richard Nixon for president at the Chicago convention. A liberal, he is considered likely to get labor endorsement.

Thornton, 50, has been attorney general for ten years. He has tangled consistently with Hatfield since Hatfield became governor in 1958, one of two GOP governors elected in the nation that year.

Denecke Named to High Court Post

Portland —UPI— Circuit Judge Arno Denecke, an appointee of Gov. Mark Hatfield, was named to the Oregon Supreme Court in Friday's primary election.

Denecke defeated Circuit Judge Lyle Wolff of Baker county, by about a 3-2 margin by winning in the more heavily populated Western Oregon area.

Wolff won in counties east of the Cascades. Technically Judge Denecke will be elected to the high court in November.

Another Hatfield appointee, Tax Judge Peter Gunnar won the first election to that post by a sizeable margin over Raymond L. Jones, Portland attorney.

Unofficial Returns Of Jackson County

Following is a complete rundown on how Jackson county voters cast their ballots in the primary election Friday.

The returns are final and complete, but are unofficial tabulations made from precinct returns. Official results will have to await the canvass conducted by the elections department of the county clerk's office, which usually takes between one and two weeks.
