Rural America Urged To Study World Affairs

Washington (UPI)—The master of the National Grange says rural America should turn its attention increasingly to group, national, and international affairs in the coming years.

Newsom pointed out that about one-third of the world's people have only recently gained political freedom. He said that very early in the next 100 years, these people will be seeking freedom from hunger.

Newsom took part in a panel discussion on the next 100 years of rural life.

Newsom said that in the early years of the nation, it was usually enough for rural Americans to accept their own individual responsibilities.

But for the decades ahead, the farm leader says something more will be needed—accepting responsibility as a nation to help meet the health and nutrition problems of the rest of the world.
