Senate Prepares For Crucial Vote On Farm Programs

Washington - (AP) - The Senate prepared for crucial votes today on farm production control programs which administration leaders say would save $4 billion or more in the next four years.

The heart of President Kennedy's farm bill is at stake, including his proposals for tough new production controls for wheat and feed grains and dropping price support to low levels if farmers refuse to accept the controls.

Less-Stringent Provisions
The bill came out of the Senate Agriculture committee with surplus-cutting programs for wheat and feed grains that were not as stringent as those the administration wanted.

The key votes were expected on amendments that would write the administration programs back into the farm bill. Democratic leaders said they expected the amendments to pass by a narrow margin.

They said it is time for farmers to realize they must either accept controls or give up high price supports.

Other congressional news:
Aid: Leaders of the House Foreign Affairs committee have lost hope that the United Nations bond issue can be tacked to President Kennedy's foreign aid bill. Informed sources said Republican leaders were opposed to the move and apparently would be able to prevent it. Backers of the UN bond bill had believed attaching it to the foreign aid program would increase its chances in the House.

Taxes: The House Ways and Means committee Wednesday approved a bill that would repeal the 10 per cent tax on railroad and intercity bus tickets and cut the airline ticket tax to 5 per cent. The provisions were included in legislation that would retain for another year temporary taxes that yield $4.3 billion a year in revenue. The committee delayed the effective date of the rail and bus travel tax repeal until Jan. 1.

Franklin, Tex. - (AP) - Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk, a Houston pathologist, planned to give his final report today of an autopsy conducted on the body of an agriculture official he thinks was murdered while investigating the Billie Sol Estes business empire.

Jachimczyk said in a preliminary report to the grand jury on Tuesday he felt Henry H. Marshall, 52, was killed last year instead of committing suicide. He said he would make a final report today after completing studies of body tissue and other tests.

An unimpeachable source told United Press International Wednesday that investigators are now fully convinced that Marshall was murdered and that three suspects are being closely watched.

He said Marshall may have been shot for revenge or to prevent detection.

The grand jury has issued a subpoena for William Elliott, head of the investigative division of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation service for this region, and ordered him to bring along his file concerning Estes' cotton acreage allotments.

The question a grand jury here is trying to decide is whether a man could commit suicide by shooting himself five times with a 22-caliber bolt-action rifle. Each shot would involve five separate hand motions. Or was Henry H. Marshall murdered? He was the head of the Production Adjustment Department of the U. S. Department of Agriculture office in Texas.

One of his duties was to look into cotton allotments, including those of Estes, now under federal and state charges of fraud and violation of Texas' antitrust laws. Marshall's body was found last June 3 on the ground of his ran, eight miles northeast of here. The rifle was investigated and ruled it suicide. Marshall was buried, and the case might have been forgotten by everybody except members of his immediate family when the Estes case broke.

Wednesday, Texas Atty. Gen. Will Wilson and Dist. Atty. Bryan Russ, both of whom are here digging into the Marshall mystery, issued a subpoena for a Department of Agriculture report, written in October of last year and dealing with Estes' farming enterprises.

Whether Marshall furnished information for the report before his death has not been specified so far.

But Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman has said the Estes case was difficult to investigate because Marshall took so many answers to the grave with him.

One witness before the grand jury Wednesday was Manley Jones, funeral director at Bryan, Tex., who prepared the body for burial. Previous to his grand jury testimony he had told reporters: "There is no doubt in my mind that Henry Marshall was quite a struggle. There were wounds like blows from something... There were indications of body and facial lesions."

Last year, there were more than 100 national advertisers who invested more than $1 million each in daily newspapers—and the largest of them bought more than $40 million worth of space.* Retailers and local advertisers agree with these industrial giants that the newspaper sells best. These retailers and local advertisers last year invested $2.9 billion in daily newspapers—more than they spent in radio, TV, magazine, and outdoor advertising COMBINED!
