

In New York fashion buyers are busy viewing winter fashions while women in the Rogue valley are preparing for the warm months ahead. Whether traveling, participating in sports, or just relaxing, milady prefers carefree clothes. A cascade of ruffles accents the neckline and short sleeves of this Junior Towne shirtwaist. It is made of silky-smooth broadcloth of Fortrel polyester and cotton which pops out of a car, suitcase or washing machine unmussed.

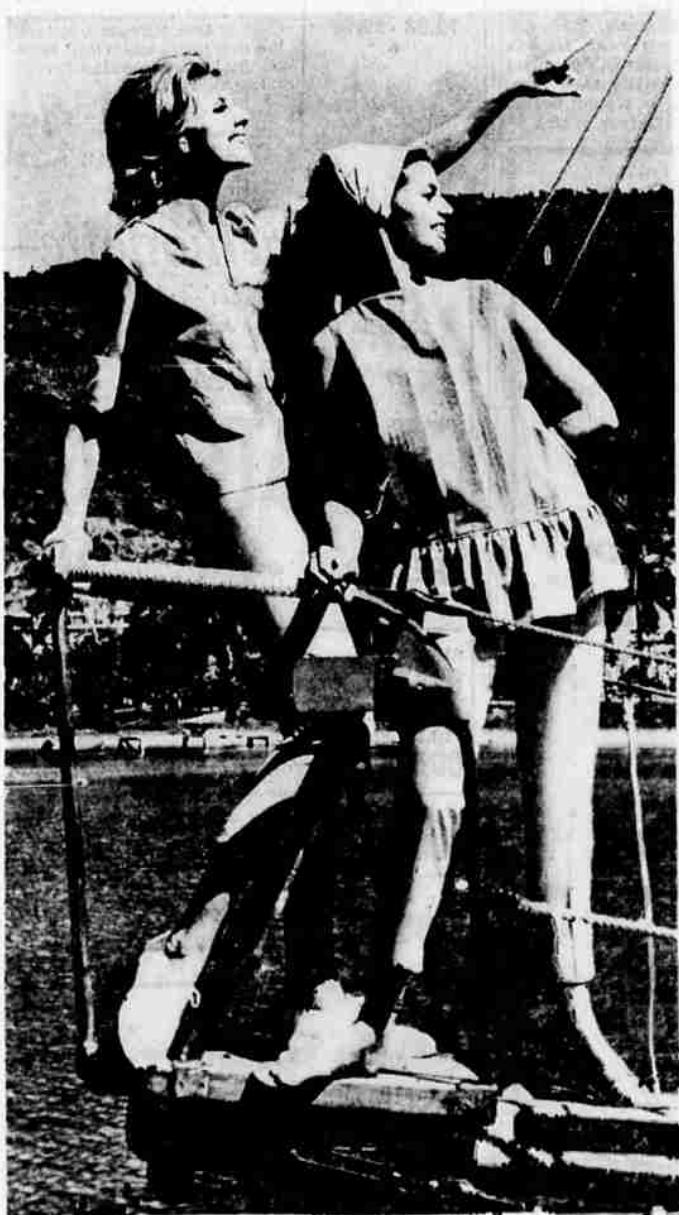

Upkeep need not bother the racquet squad with this feminine tennis outfit (center, above) or this denim dandy above. The tennis outfit, designed by Townway, is made from Skinner's open weave blend of polyester and cotton. The slit sides of tunic are edged with eyelet to match the ruffled panties. The denim is of Celanese Arnel triacetate and cotton. Nan Dee's fussless fashions have brought new elegance to maternity wear. Bright red Haba print lines the draw-through neckline.

After a swim in a flattering Rose Marie Reid draped sheath swimming suit, slip into a Charles Dickey frock with tunic top (center, below). The swim suit, made of satin lastex, is worn with a multi-colored petal cap. The dress, perfect for sight-seeing, is a Dan River wrinkle resistant glen plaid of polyester and cotton and stays smooth and shapely through endless sitting and standing. Oversized patch pockets accent the tunic top.

Whether a sea-going gal's tastes run to plain or fancy, these are the clothes to fit occasion and predilection. J. I. Originals suggests skinny pants topped by a hooded sailor's jacket for the yachtswoman who likes her clothes tailored—a frill-edged sleeveless tunic for the girl who clings to the feminine look. Klebanow's Fortrel polyester and cotton blend, crease-resisting and easy care for, is used for both outfits.

For a quick change after a day of traveling, this Alomar designed frock with flaring skirt, will fit the bill. Made of Celanese Arnel triacetate and cotton, the fabric hand washes, and dries in the briefest time. The dress, with accented high waistline, ties with a self string belt with solid colored tassels.
