

ARTIST RESCUED - Firemen go to the rescue of bearded, shoeless artist Heinz Dressler, top, on a beam atop the hull of a demolished warehouse in San Francisco. Firemen rushed to the scene when it was feared Dressler was attempting suicide. He was sunning himself, he told police, and was sorry he caused such a commotion. He also admitted he didn't know how to get down, so it's a good thing the firemen decided to investigate. (UPI)

King-Anderson Bill Attacked at Ashland Chamber Luncheon

Ashland - The King-Anderson medicare bill is based on two erroneous assumptions, according to Dr. Christian P. Hald, Ashland physician, in a talk before the Ashland Chamber of Commerce Tuesday.

Dr. Hald said the two assumptions are that a majority of persons 65 and over are in poor health and that a majority of them do not have adequate insurance coverage to take care of health emergencies.

Student Council Workshop Planned

Eugene - High school student council members from throughout Oregon will participate in the 11th and 12th Student Council Workshops at the University of Oregon Aug. 5-10 and 12-17.

The program is aimed at giving students an understanding of the objectives and role of the student council, and a knowledge of techniques in group leadership. It is also geared toward more uniform practices in student council work throughout the state.

Graduate credit will be available for student council sponsors, administrators and other interested educators who enroll in a special section at the workshops.

BIG DADDY - Haystack Calhoun, who weighs 601 pounds, is a mighty big daddy compared to his newborn daughter, Kathy Elizabeth, who weighs six pounds, 11 ounces. Calhoun is a wrestler. His wife weighs 230 pounds. (UPI)
