Family Council

Editors note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counselors and social workers. Edited by Mrs. Alma Denny. (Copyright by General Features Corp.)

Lloyd H. — They should give the spare room to me.
Mrs. O.H. — We need it for so many other purposes.

Lloyd H. — I'm 13 years old and I'm trying to convince my parents that I should have the bedroom that's going to be empty next month when my grandmother moves out. Right now I share a room with my kid brother. He's 8. My baby brother has a crib in Grandma's room. My idea is for the baby to move into my room with Bud, and for me to have a room alone.

Bud drives me nuts. Here I'm doing high school work now and he's up there with his friends — wrestling, throwing shoes around, making barnyard sounds or something equally kooky. I can promise Mom she'll see a big difference in me and my marks. And I'll put my things away and keep the room clean and neat. But she's wriggling out. She says she has other plans. That's terrible.

Mrs. O.H. — Of course I sympathize with Lloyd, trying to do quiet studying with Bud barging around. I keep chasing him out outdoors or shushing him, but an 8-year-old has some rights, too. There'd be no problem if we had five or six bedrooms to hand out.

But now that Mother's room will be vacant, we must decide the best thing to do with it. I may be able to get a college girl who'll sleep in with the baby and help me in return for room and board. Or, we'd move the baby in our room and turn that one into a den, TV room, playroom or maybe a sewing room for me. We need a guest room, too.

We have to give it lots of thought, Lloyd can't expect us to say yes unless it's best for all concerned, not just him.

The Council: It's no news, but here's added proof, that many of the world's woes boil down to the lack of lebensraum, and conversely we'd probably all be as happy as kings if we had their multi-chambered castles to live in. (Come to think of it, there aren't many happy kings—but that's another topic.) Our boxed-in housing allotments turn modern life into an education in the fine art of getting along with those who step on your toes, crowd your closet, occupy the space you'd like to stretch out in. Lloyd and his family are learning how.

But hard as the decision is, we'll take a deep breath and venture a vote for Lloyd. What with hide-a-beds and other trompe l'oeil tricks, we'll bet Mrs. H. can work out makeshifts to cover some of her other needs. The situation will change. The family may move. As of now, however, we deem the most worthwhile use of the empty room would be as sanctuary for this serious-minded adolescent boy.

First, it would inspire neatness and orderliness, and impart an air of tranquillity—all booms in a teen-ager's turbulent life. Then, it would give Lloyd a quiet perch from which to figure out a few things for himself — where he fits in the world, what his special talents and tastes are. Everyone needs a Think Room. People find it in a library, an office, a church or a temple. Lloyd will have it at a time when wonderment and puzzlement assail the growing boy.

And of course he'll have good study conditions, a rare and important commodity of the high school years. So rare indeed is this sort of aid that two Texas psychologists recommend that students post rude signs on their doors saying "Get Lost" or "Scram Please."

Comfort for Mrs. H. comes in the thought that Lloyd will move out of the room to go to college, and by that time noisy Bud will be the teen-ager who needs a little privacy.

Medical Clinic

Rewatched, Burned

Hillsdale — A medical clinic was burglarized and then set on fire about midnight Tuesday, police said Wednesday.

The Hillsdale Medical-Dental Clinic was burned extensively in rear rooms of the one-story building. The clinic was valued at $50,000.

Police said the burglarly attempt was apparently not successful. Papers were thrown about the offices, but no money was kept in the safe.

Dr. Robert W. Kullberg, owner of the clinic, said loss from the fire was estimated at about $30,000.
