

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER SR., never considered exactly a spendthrift, was accused outside his office by a smooth-talking panhandler who announced, "Mr. Rockefeller, I hooped it thirty miles down here just to meet you, and everybody I met assured me you were the most generous man in New York."

Mr. Rockefeller thought this over for a minute, then asked quietly, "Are you going back by the same route?" "Probably," said the panhandler. "Aha," nodded J. D., "in that case you can do me a great favor. Deny the rumor."

Frances Parkinson Keyes tells about a Cajun horse-trading wizard west of New Orleans who gave a prospective customer a big build-up on a nag he wanted to sell and concluded, "That horse is not only the most beautiful and speediest in the whole parish, but he is one great actor as well. When you go down to the paddock to see him, just watch that old devil act like he's gone lame!"

A policeman heard a loud argument going on inside a shop. Investigating, he found nobody on the premises but the owner. "I get bored when there are no customers around," explained the owner sheepishly, "so I often start an argument with myself."

"Okay," conceded the cop, "but what was all the yelling about?"

"If there's one thing I can't tolerate," said the owner, "it's a liar."

Compromise Bill For Oregon Dunes In Drafting Stage

By ROBERT SMITH
Mail Tribune Washington Correspondent

Washington (Special) — Sen. Maurice B. Neuberger and the Kennedy Administration are working out a compromise Oregon Dunes park bill. The new proposal will be designed to eliminate much, if not all, of the local objections from property owners in the area. The bill is expected to be a stripped-down version of the original Neuberger proposal, leaving much of the private lakeside property unchanged.

The new proposal, still in the drafting stage, is the upshot of conferences between Sen. Neuberger and Dr. Edward C. Crafts, director of the newly created Bureau of Outdoor Recreation in the Interior Department.

The Recreation Bureau has been assigned responsibilities for planning new outdoor recreation facilities. The other old line agencies of the government, as well as state and local agencies, will continue to manage such facilities. Endorsement Withheld

Crafts is seeking to resolve the split between the National Park Service and the Forest Service over the Oregon Dunes issue so that President Kennedy can recommend a seashore park bill to Congress. Because of opposition from the Forest Service, supported by Agriculture Secretary Freeman, the White House earlier this year withheld endorsement of the pending Neuberger bill. As a result no congressional action on that measure has been taken or is in prospect.

Under the new bill, apparently both agencies would give some ground. The proposed seashore park would be managed by the National Park Service, but it would not embrace the fresh water lakes inland from the dunes as originally recommended by the Park Service.

The precise size or boundaries of the new project area are still in the blueprint stage, but Mrs. Neuberger said it would be less acreage than her original proposal which involved some 30,000 acres.

Roughly, the compromise plan would include the dunes area west of the coast highway and enough land east of the highway to provide a scenic corridor for tourists traveling through the area. Much of the land west of the highway is already government owned. The property Mrs. Neuberger has in mind east of the highway is partly public and partly private land. If the park were limited to the lands west of the highway, the senator fears the east side of the road would become a "honky-tonk" section of commercial establishments which would injure the esthetic value of the area.

The length of the park along the coast would not be changed appreciably, if at all, the senator indicated, stretching from near Florence to Reedsport.

Rep. Edwin R. Durno, who wanted the Forest Service to develop a limited area of government property, had proposed extending the park to Coos Bay. State Rep. Robert Duncan, who is seeking Durno's congressional seat, has suggested a similar length. Duncan talked with Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall and Mrs. Neuberger recently about a compromise that would eliminate all of the inland lake area.

The outcome of the upcoming congressional race in that fourth district could influence the course of the dunes park development. Carl Fisher, the GOP candidate, has expressed sympathy for Forest Service development; Duncan for Park Service development. But neither supports inclusion of the inland lakes and all the private lakeside residences and now Sen. Neuberger is willing to discard that most controversial part in order to gain action on the chief elements of a dunes park.

Pershing Missile Returns To Course
Cape Canaveral, Fla. — (UPI) — The Army's Pershing missile, momentarily pushed off course by simulated gale force winds, got back on the track Monday night in a 300-mile test flight.

The Pershing's success in the wind test came less than 12 hours after a Navy Polaris missile whirled off course, without any winds, just 90 seconds after launch and had to be destroyed.

Missilemen built 50-mile an hour winds into the brain of the 30-foot Pershing to see if its guidance system could right itself and get back on course.

The missile, launched in a colorful night firing, tilted just a bit at liftoff, then corrected itself and raced through the black sky. Its dummy warhead impacted in a target area downrange to rack up the Pershing's 31st success in 37 test missions here.

First Alaskan Ferry Christened
Seattle — (UPI) — The first of Alaska's three new state ferries was christened the MV Malaspina Monday night by Mrs. William A. Egan, wife of the governor of Alaska, at launching ceremonies here.

The 332-foot, 3,500-ton vessel was launched at the Puget Sound Bridge and Drydock Co. on Harbor Island. The Malaspina will be used on a route between Prince Rupert, B.C., and Haines, Alaska. Cities served will include Ketchikan, Wrangell, Petersburg, Sitka, Juneau and Skagway. The ferry is expected to be in service by late September.

In the Day's News

By FRANK JENKINS

A few days ago, the Portland Oregonian carried on an inside page a rather interesting piece by its society editor. This is the gist of it:

In Washington recently, Mrs. Kennedy's press secretary (a Miss Pamela Turnure) called in the small corps of society reporters who cover the White House and laid down to them a new set of ground rules for White House reporting.

In the future, Miss Turnure told them, toasts, responses and other formal statements may be reported. BUT THAT'S ALL. Personal observations, even when the reporter seeks out the reporter, may not be published. She added: "You can find plenty to write about in describing the gown, jewelry, hair-dos, menu, entertainment and things like that."

"BUT," one of the reporters asked, "what are we to do when the President or Mrs. Kennedy comes up and talks to us? Anything they say is NEWS, even if it is only chitchat. Are we to forego even that?"

Miss Turnure replied: "You are supposed to avoid personal contact with the President and Mrs. Kennedy. Just walk the other way, or slowly move out of their sight by losing yourself among the guests. If that can't be done and the President does engage you in conversation, then anything he says is definitely NOT to be quoted or repeated in or outside the White House. That is the new rule."

AS EXPLAINED by Miss Turnure, the new policy is deemed necessary for three reasons:

1. To protect the right to privacy of the President, Mrs. Kennedy and their guests.
2. To avoid "embarrassment" for them.
3. To avoid "distorting the public image" of the President and the First Lady.

SUNDAY morning, an Associated Press dispatch from Washington reported that veteran White House shorthand specialist Jack Romagna, who has been transcribing Presidential news conferences since the days of FDR, was fired on Friday.

The dispatch went on to say:

"It was known that the White House was displeased with Romagna recently when he transcribed the President's remarks made by telephone to a national convention of mayors. He noted on the transcript that the President had spoken FROM THE WHITE HOUSE SWIMMING POOL. Copies of the transcript were quickly recalled and a new one was issued with no mention of the pool."

QUESTION: If it is all right to speak to the nation's mayors in convention assembled from the White House swimming pool, why is it ALL WRONG to tell the public about it?

AH ME! We're going places. NEW places. Places where George Washington and Thomas Jefferson and Teddy Roosevelt and DWIGHT EISENHOWER could never have imagined that we would EVER be going.

Automation Blamed For Man's Suicide

Rollston, England — (UPI) — Horace Moulds, 53, was the envy of all his bachelor friends. They were jealous of the fact that he worked with 52 girls in the packing department of a sugar factory.

Moulds was happy in his job until one day automation came to the factory and machinery replaced the girls. Moulds became so upset he apparently decided he had nothing left to live for. Coroner Claude Mack ruled Monday that Moulds committed suicide.

"He worried over the machines," Mack said. "They replaced 99 per cent of the human element and it was possible Mr. Moulds could not adapt himself to automation."

Alaskan Interests Declared Slighted

Seattle — (UPI) — Sen. Ernest Gruening (D-Alaska) charged here Monday that the U.S. State Department historically has sided against the interests of Alaska.

"The State Department always seems to take the side of the foreign nations against our own interests," Gruening said.

Gruening added that not since Cordell Hull served warning on the Japanese in 1936 to get their fishing fleets out of Bristol Bay has Alaska had any support from the department.

Gov. William Egan of Alaska earlier said his state has won the first round in its effort to protect its fishing grounds against Japanese encroachment.

Egan refused recently to allow Japanese fishing boats to operate in the Shelikof Strait. He said the Japanese fishing venture was merely a "probing expedition" aimed at establishing precedents. A secondary consideration, he said, was to determine how strongly the local Alaska state government would react.

MORE FISH IN DIET Moscow — (UPI) — The official news agency Tass said Monday the Soviet government plans to increase its annual catch of fish by almost 50 per cent by 1965 to make up for the country's lag in farm production.
