

Sheer Woolens Shown For Evening Apparel

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
New York—It will be wool, wool, wool for the cool, cool, cool of the evenings next fall and winter. The unconventional use of sheer wools for formal apparel shows throughout the new fashion collections being previewed by New York garment manufacturers.

Satin is teamed with pale tweeds in evening suits. Wools show up as slinky, floor length evening gowns. And floral brocades line tweed coats or other bulky woolens and top short formal dresses repeating the brocades.

Designed Jacques Tiffreau of Monte Sano and Pruzan showed floor length formal dresses sculpturing the body in chiffon weight wools in black or Egyptian clay, a reddish brown hue.

Souffle Wools
Bill Bliss, designer at Maurice Rentner, used souffle wools for long formal with bare backs and halter or scoop front necks.

Luis Estevez did sheer wool sheaths with chiffon topplings to cover otherwise bare shoulders.

At Marquise, the show stopper was a kelly green coat whose surface looked deepened as an unshorn sheep. It topped a white satin formal gown; the satin was repeated in the coat lining.

Designed Doland Brooks at Townley included a group of long, flowing formal in sheer wools in hi: collection previewed Tuesday for store buyers and fashion writers.

At Ben Zuckerman's show, the favorite combinations for theater or dinner suits were tweeds or other bulky wools combined with silk moire or shadow-printed brocades in pale blues, pinks and yellow on white background. Typical of this group—a princess shaped coat in deep raspberry red paired with a sleeveless, collarless formal in pale pink brocade. The coat lining was the same as the dress.

Strawberries, fresh or frozen, are a delight to homemakers because they can be served in so many delicious ways. One of the most enjoyable combinations is to top sweetened whole berries with cream and serve with crisp chocolate-coconut cookies. Here the chocolate is drizzled on to form a lacy pattern. The result—a cookie as good as it is pretty!

Florentines
1/2 cup sifted flour
Dash of salt
1/4 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons light corn syrup
1 egg, well beaten
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup flaked coconut
2 squares Baker's Dot Chocolate

Sift flour once, measure, add salt and soda and sift again. Cream butter; add sugar gradually, creaming until light and fluffy. Add corn syrup and egg and beat well. Stir in flour, vanilla and coconut. Drop by 1/2 teaspoonfuls about 2 inches apart, on greased baking sheet. Spread into thin rounds. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 8 minutes. Remove at once from baking sheet. Cool.

Heat chocolate over hot water until partly melted; then remove from hot water and stir rapidly until entirely melted; then drizzle the chocolate in lacy pattern over bottoms of wafers. Makes 4 dozen.

With the field trip season now in full swing, this information may prove valuable to the ardent "rockhound" who enjoys doing his collecting off the beaten track, it is noted.

Business will include the matter of having a show next year, and instructing the federation director on how to vote on the Northwest Federation's resolutions.

Details of the June field trip will be announced. Weather permitting, it will be to Agate Flats this week end, June 9 and 10.

All interested persons are invited to attend. Refreshments for the evening will be provided by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Dunsenbury, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ricks, and Mr. and Mrs. Anson Pitcher.

Rough Fibers
New York—UPI—Home economists report the higher the oil content of the carpet fiber, the greater its soil retention. The same is true of fiber roughness. Wool and viscose fibers have a higher degree of oiliness and all fibers, natural and synthetic, have rough surfaces.

Hornbrook Couple Return From Trip; Comment on Fair

Hornbrook — Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bear returned Friday from a 12-day trip north. In Salem and in the Portland area they visited relatives of Mr. Bear, and in Seattle, Tacoma, and Auburn, Wash., they were guests of relatives of both. They also spent one day at the Seattle World's Fair, and plan to return later in the summer for a longer stay at the fair.

Contrary to many reports of exorbitant prices at the Fair, the visitors found prices in keeping with whatever one wishes to pay. Our own U.S. Science building, the Bears thought, far surpassed any others, although they felt the Swedish and the British exhibits compared.

Mr. and Mrs. Bear came to Hornbrook from the Seattle area seven years ago, and have made many trips back during that time, but both agreed they never had seen the states of Oregon and Washington more lovely, with the valleys lush and green, and rhododendrons, broom, and other flowers at their peak.

Mothers Participate In Visitation Day Events at Williams

Williams—Tea was served to the mothers of the incoming first graders at the Williams school recently, after the children had taken part in the visitation day. They were allowed to come to school on the bus and were told of the forthcoming year's expectations by first grade teacher, Mrs. Richard West.

During the afternoon forms for registration were given out and state and county regulations explained to those parents present. A class of approximately 15 students is expected to enroll in the first grade for the term beginning in September.

Refreshments were supplied by the Williams Parent Teacher group and served by the first grade room mothers, Mrs. Aaron Morrison and Mrs. James Tompkins.

On the same day, the remainder of the school took part in a "move up" day, when the students advanced to the grade they will be studying in next year. They were given work of that grade level and a preview of their studies for the coming year.

The eighth grade students were excused from school for that particular day.
